(Allegedly. - Ed) Giant multinational software conglomerates, eh? Who needs disk 'em? They're the future, your future etc.

INTRODUCING DISK 30

DMARKS

Yes, it's another chance to marvel at the wondrousness of Blitz Basic 2, as Vision Software bring you an exclusive AP track from their forthcoming Super Off Road beating race game. If you loved Defender, you'll adore this beyond all logical reason. we like to think. Play it and prove us wrong, if you can.

developers Rasputin Software. It's tricky, but it's fun. Really.

A clever and imaginative reworking of an old theme - try it for yourself and see. Would we lie to you?

GOT A FAULTY DISK?

Oh no! Are you sure? Before you go any further, try the procedures described in the panel over the page. If, after all that, you do have disk problems, simply place it in an envelope, along with an SAE and an explanatory letter, and return it NOT TO THE AP OFFICE but to: AMIGA POWER Disk Returns 30, DisCopy Labs, PO Box 21, Daventry NN11 5BU. Send it to us, and we'll come round and kill you.

YOUR DISK AND YOU

READ THIS BIT FIRST OR NO-ONE WILL TAKE ANY NOTICE OF YOU WHEN YOU SAY THAT YOUR DISK DOESN'T WORK.

• Skidmarks and Jet Strike are one meg only. We kid you not. A1200's now come with two meg as standard. Get with the program.

• To load any of the games, all you have to do is switch off your machine, insert the disk, and switch your machine back on again.

 An options menu will appear.
 Simply follow the instructions to load the game of your choice.

 Just to be on the safe side, though, the on-screen instructions say that you should press the appropriate function key to make your selection.

• You'll have to reset your machine in order to play one of the other demos. When you do so, simply follow the instructions above.

Remember to keep the disk you are playing your game from in the drive at all times. And remember – switching the machine off for 20 seconds or so before loading a new program will help prevent disks being infected by stray viruses.

Have a good time.

OH NO! SOMETHING WENT WRONG!

• Are you sure?

• Try all that stuff again, making sure you've disconnected any peripherals the program might not 'like', such as external drives.

• If your disk fails to load, then pop it in a padded envelope, along with a letter explaining the problem and an SAE, to:

AMIGA POWER Disk 30 Returns DisCopy Labs PO Box 21 Daventry NN11 5BU.

• We're really hoping that you're reading this bit, because it's quite important: please don't send your disks to us at the AMIGA POWER office. We really don't know how to fix dodgy disks. We've tried, we really have, but not very hard. So send it to DisCopy Labs. Please. Wahey! First to complete just under three laps of this meandering jump-laden course is the winner!

BUT FIRST, A WORD FROM OUR SPONSORS

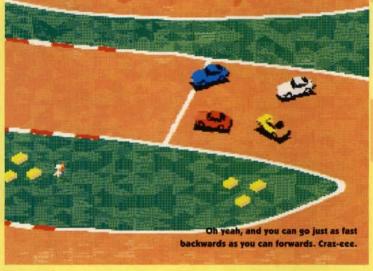

Bitz Basic 2, eh? Don't you just love it? This fabulous programming-language utility has already been used by our chums at Vision to produce the fabulous Defender clone which graced our issue 26 coverdisk, and now they've written this fab Super Off-Road clone with it too. Check 'em both out (No Defender? Back issues available on page 112 – don't miss 'em!), compare the results with your normal Brand X programming utility, then immediately wonder how on Earth you can get your hands on a copy of this fantastic thing right now. (Amazing to think this is all written in compiled Blitz Basic – I mean, you don't see commercial games written in AMOS. Do you? – Tech Ed) Then stop wondering again immediately, because you've found out that there's a fullyworking version of BB2 given away entirely free in the next issue of our sister magazine Amiga Format. Leap for joy.

WELCOME BACK!

You join us again in the middle of Skidmarks Instructions Hour, just in time for a quick run-down of exactly how to go about playing this rather lovely one- or two-player game. Like you were going to ask. Accelerate by pressing fire or up on the joystick, steer left and right with, well, left and right (you can also use the cursor keys or, if you're totally bonkers, the mouse), and try to finish in front of the other cars. You already knew that. Why are you still here reading? Go on, clear off.

he hissed, "I haven't got much time." A flicker of hope crossed Mike's face as the agent relayed the instructions to him.

"At first the plane might seem a bit tricky to control, but it's much easier if you get used to the fact that the up and down controls are reversed when you change direction. It's logical if you think about it, really. Also, keep the autothrottle on to start with (by pressing the left Amiga key) and you'll crash a lot less. Press down when you're on the runway to access the armoury and aircraft select screens, and use 'U' to raise and lower the undercarriage." The sound of gunfire from outside drew closer, and seemed to trigger further recollection in the agent's fevered mind. "To fire your extra weapons, use fire and left for the left weapon, and fire and right for the right weapon. If it looks like you're going to bite tarmac, the spacebar ejects, but if enemy capture seems inevitable, hold down fire and 'Esc' to self-destruct."

At that very moment, the door burst open again and the agent fell inelegantly to the floor, a machine-gun chattering its brutal monologue of death behind him in the hands of a foreign stormtrooper. But Mike was already far away, the secret trapdoor closed behind him and thoughts of revenge dancing across his nerve-endings...

Author: Paul Van Der Valk

an Der Valk? Any relation to the famous Dutch TV detective of the early 70s, do you think? No, probably not, since the Netherlandian gumshoe was an entirely fictional dramatic character, whereas Paul VDV here guite clearly couldn't be more real. And just to prove it. Paul's written this stonking and different PD Breakout-alike with which to enthral and entertain you, our lovely readers. And all for no reward other than the undying gratitude of thousands of Amiga owners and the chance to have a tired and overworked AMIGA POWER team stereotypically take the mickey out of his name. What a wonderful and well-adjusted chap he must be.

Anyway, here's Poing. It's extremely unlikely that you're going to need any instructions for a Breakout game, but you're going to get them anyway because we've all temporarily forgotten how to play Jet Strike and none of us can be bothered to go and get the instruction manual out again to check. Using the mouse, move your bat (the white line at the left-hand edge of the screen) to deflect the ball (a small and ironically square white dot ricocheting frantically all over the place) into the wall of coloured bricks at the right-hand edge of the screen (a load of coloured rectangles at the, er, right-hand edge of the screen. Like I said.) The objective is to smash through the rightermost (The what? – Ed) column of bricks and repeatedly hit the white line behind it. Doing this will reduce the forcefield on the wall (indicated by the 'Force' bar at the bottom right, until it gets so weakened that it disappears, allowing you to fire the ball through it and move on to the next level.

If you let the ball escape on the left-hand side of the screen, however, the game's up and you're in trouble – you get catapulted back to the previous screen, except with everything moving about 50 times as fast. You can rescue the ball here if you're good, but otherwise you'll keep going back through the screens until you lose the ball on the first one again, at which point you lose a life. Hitting various other blocks will bring various other effects into play (and watch out for the weirdo gravity effects on later levels), but Dave's just remembered how to play Jet Strike again, so I'm off now to write the instructions for that. Bye.

Dave got all the way up to level seven or

points) on only his second go. So there.

THE MALL BRAT

t'll be the event of the entire year, and everybody is going to be there. What is it? Why, The Second Future Entertainment by Dave 'n' Linda Show, of course. It's still a couple of months away, so you've got plenty of time to save up and absolutely no excuse for not coming along. Well, you wouldn't want to miss out on any of the top bargains or excellent entertainment opportunities, would you? Pardon? What's that? You've still got a few more questions you'd like answered? Don't worry, we're here to help!

> As you can see from the pics, last year's Future Entertainment Show was absolutely brill. And this year's will be even better.

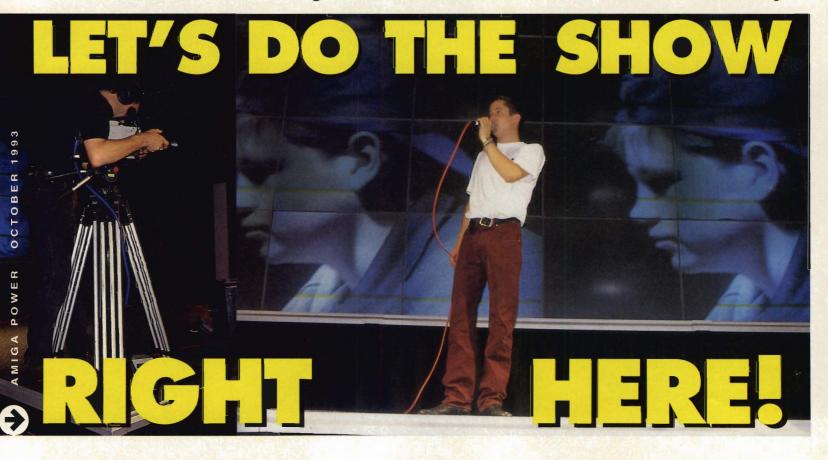

When's it going to be, then?

The dates to inscribe in your diaries in six-foot-high dayglo highlighter letters are Thursday 11th to Sunday 14th of November. That's 1993, you clot. There are 'special days', too - but more on these later.

Where is it, and how do I get there? They'll be trying to contain the thrills within the building known as Olympia Exhibition

It's futuristic! It's entertaining! It's the second one of itself! And it's time to say...

Coming by car? Be sure to arrive early to make sure of a good parking space.

Centre, London. You can get there in an aeroplane. You can get there in a train. You can get there in a caravan (if you must). Just get there, if you can.

Who's going to be there?

Who isn't? Well, Her Majesty the Queen might not be gracing the event with her presence, but who needs token representatives of the British monarchy when you've got a guest list like ours? Commodore will be flaunting their brand new Amiga baby, the super high-tech £300 CD32 console (with a CD in it), along with loads of softies unveiling their latest games and literally stands full of companies shifting both hardware and software at prices that we'd describe as 'unbelievably cheap'. If we hadn't already taken advantage of them ourselves, that is. In an extraordinary act of audio-visual collaboration, BBC Radio One, Capital Radio and TV's GamesMaster will all be broadcasting live from the show, although not on the same frequency we trust, otherwise a hilarious mix-up could occur.

Oh, and of course we'll be there too! So come along and meet the AMIGA POWER team in person. It could be a once-in-a-lifetime chance to physically marvel at Stuart's haircut, Steve's tallness and Mark's genuinely unhealthy obsession It's dreamy Dexter Fletcher, the fab new presenter of GamesMaster. Sega Mega CD machine. The games haven't been decided on yet either, but our Stuart's going to choose them so they'll be dead good and pretty darn tough. Guaranteed! (Check your local Virgin Gamestore for details of the actual heats or, if that seems like too much bother, go find the ad in this very magazine. Here's a clue: it's on page 92! I mean, are we making things easy for you, or what?)

Okay, let's get serious now. How much is all this going to cost me?

If you're going by yourself, or in a group of young friends, a one-day pass to the magical land of futuristic entertainment will set you back a paltry £6.95. If you're planning on taking the whole family then you might be better off getting a family ticket for £24.95. This'll admit four people, but one of them has to be an adult. The other MOST IMPORTANT thing that you need to remember is that, in order to avoid disappointment on the day, you'll need to get your tickets in advance. YOU WON'T BE ABLE TO BUY THEM ON THE DOOR, OKAY? Where do you your advance tickets from? Well, the easiest way is to call our credit card hotline on 051 356 5085, or you can always us the boring old postal service and the form on page 39 of this ish.

Are there any other 'incentives'?

Well, if you buy a ticket for the Friday, we'll give you a special preview ticket for the up-and-coming Disney cartoon blockbuster that everyone's talking about: Aladdin. Get to see what promises to be a great movie (with Robin Williams in it) absolutely free. And before everybody else does! I literally can't believe you haven't dashed to the phone already! Call that hotline! NOW!

How can I find out more?

More! Well, my insatiable one, you'll have to keep an eye (and an ear) out for special newspaper guides and radio announcements and competitions and the like, soon to be saturating all known media. And of course we'll be raving all about it in next month's issue too. There can be no escape.

See ya there, then? You betcha!

FOR FREE

Short of cash? Feelin' lucky? Or just an incurable opportunist? Either way, you could save yourself almost seven pounds by winning one of the ten tickets up for grabs in this month's frenzied fab free give-away competition concept. Possibly. Just send us a postcard featuring your name, address and the day you'd like to visit the show on, and if yours is one of the ten that we pluck from the great big AP compo hat; you'll get a lucky ticket of your own. But hurry! We'll be picking the winners on September 20th, so you can't afford to hang about. Oh, and be sure to address your postcard: Frankly I Think That This 'Joke' Of Having Stupidly Long Names For Competitions Is Wearing A Bit Thin Now But I'm Giving You One Last Chance In The Hope That You'll Eventually See Sense, AMIGA POWER, 30 Monmouth St, Bath, Avon BA1 2DL. AMIGA POWER OCTOBER 1993

NOT EPIC 2, REALLY IT'S NOT GOING

Fresh from Digital Image Design comes Inferno, a 3D space sim that promises to be "mind-bafflingly complex". As your playground you've got an entire solar system comprising seven planets, three moons and some seriously dodgy weather conditions. Oh, and you're also up against several hundred deadly enemy craft, all with some of the itchiest trigger fingers since Velcro's ill-advised foray into joystick manufacturing.

Now, those of you with long memories will recall that DID's previous claim to fame was being responsible for Epic, that gorgeouslooking (but entertainmentlychallenged) space extravaganza. Inferno, however, is far more than just

> A bad guy. Or maybe the singer from out of Alien Sex Fiend. Who can tell?

As the sun sets over the horizon, more alien craft eat laser-fuelled death.

Epic 2 - from what we've seen, the allnew team have come up with some of the most spectacular 3D graphics yet seen on the Amiga, including sequences where you get to fly your space-plane around inside the corridors of massive motherships. Star Wars a-go-go, or what?

Just to add to the bizarre multi-media experience, the game'll come with a comic book introducing you to the scenario and the characters, plus a movie-style soundtrack composed, performed and produced by none other than cultstatus goth-rockers Alien Sex Fiend, Yet another example of how pop music is killing video games, or whatever it is the Sunday newspapers are wittering on about nowadays. Inferno looks likely for A1200/CD32 release by the end of this year, so watch out for a full preview soon!

You can even fly by night (or 'catch the red-eye', as I believe it's called).

BATTY!

Have you got Graham Gooch World Class Cricket (as excitingly previewed on our June 1993 coverdisk)? Played it? Liked it? Fancy some more of the same? If the answer to all four questions is a resounding 'yes' then Audiogenic have got just the thing for you - their new data disk, Graham Gooch's Second Innings, has numerous extra features including the chance to relive the highlights of the 1964 series (Which, we understand, was the last time England won anything. - Ed).

To give games that extra edge, your opponents have been made even tougher. And! There are more options and more (hurrah?) statistics. It should be out around nowish, so keep your peepers peeled for it.

THEY ARE THE CHAMPIONS

Remember FA Premier League Football, one of our corking coverdisk demos from way back in the April '93 issue? Well, it's going to be released soon, in a "considerably re-worked form", and under a different name European Champions. Plus, it'll now link up with Ocean's forthcoming football management sim, Super League Manager (out in October), for added on-and-off-thepitch realism. Both games will cost £25.99. Hmm. It seems that fans of football games with the word 'Champions' in their title will be in for a very big treat this autumn, 'cos that's also when Krisalis will be bringing out their soccer arcade simulation, Manchester United - Premier League Champions. Sequel to those popular side-on kickarounds, Manchester United and Manchester United Europe, the new one will have a top-down view of the action and cost £29.99.

NO TOMATOES. What's red and invisible? Erm, we don't know either, but that's the kind of gag told by Cosmic Spacehead in the interactive arcade adventure of the same name. Cosmic is the latest in a long line of cutesy Codemasters heroes, a cute li'l ol' alien from the planet Linoleum who he needs some holiday snaps - of the journey to earth. The route from Linoleum to Earth includes three major stop-offs:

Q. What's got no mass and no charge? A. No neutrinos! I thank you.

Island Dizzy, Fantasy World Dizzy, Dizzy Engineers etc etc.

on a lone asteroid called Detroitica and a space station.

Each stop-off is divided into subgames, so there's plenty to do - Mr Spacehead can interact with other characters and manipulate objects using all yer usual adventure commands in order to complete the 32 chunks of arcade action. Wahey! CS is all set for mega-stardom, as Central TV are planning an entire prog based around the amicable alien. You'll have to wait till November for the full review, so you'll just have to make do with this cute li'l pic (far left) of him for now.

Oh yeah, and Codemasters are also bringing out another platformypuzzley Dizzy sort of game on the Amiga. It's going to be called Fantastic Dizzy. 'Nuff said.

IN STOCK SOON

Bill Elliot's NASCAR Challenge – thrill-packed Well, this is what it looks like on one of the office Macs. As you 3D car-crashing action heading your way.

Bored of flimsy Formula One racing cars that crumple like cardboard every time you bounce off the crash barrier? Then you need Bill Elliot's NASCAR Challenge, the heavy-duty stock car race game for real men (and women), out very soon from Gametek.

NASCAR stands for the National Association of Stock Car Racing (well, near enough), and has apparently become a "national obsession" over in the USA, making household names of drivers like 'Cale Yarborough', 'Dale Earnhardt', 'Rusty Wallace', 'Richard Petty' and, of course 'Awesome Bill from Dawsonville', Mr Elliot himself. Of more interest to you, sports fans, is the fact that it's also noted for its high speeds and spectacular crashes, all of which should be recreated in vivid polygonsmashing action in the game.

Other features include a choice of real NASCAR tracks (so you can boast about your best speed round Daytona and Talladega), taking in both highbanked oval tracks and, er, nonbanked road ones. It's also got instant replays, both "fatal" and "non-fatal" accidents, and a range of car customising options, right down to engine tuning and modifying the angle of the spoiler. Or you can just go for the quick race option and skip that sort of stuff.

But that's not all that Gametek have got up their professionally-tailored powerdressing sleeves, indeed not. Also on their agenda for release this 'fall' is an enhanced A1200 version of puzzley Lemmings-a-like, Humans, and the official Amiga licence of American Gladiators, which as true late-night TV fans will know, is pretty much like the UK version of Gladiators only can see, we're getting left behind here. Excuse me a minute ...

Pugils aboy! Next month: Some Americans tell us that it would be cool to go and jump in a river ...

> our June ish. nostalgia lovers) and, who knows, Humans 2 sometime early next year. With a debut selection like this, we reckon Gametek will be a company to look out for in the future. Well, probably.

...so we do! Seriously, we all love American Gladiators. Yum yum.

NEWS

The only time computer games seem to get in the news is in connection with something bad, which is why ELSPA have got together with the Video Standards Council to ensure that all members agree to keep certain rules and don't go around causing offence to your Auntie Pam. Part of the reason for this is the fact that, with the advent of CD technology, a lot of games now have the facility to use real film footage and so they have to be dealt with in the same way as vids. So, is the age of the PG game upon us? And will it mean that your dad has to play them all first to make sure they're okay?

WE'VE BEEN FRAMED!

And now you can be too! Screenies are coloured cardboard frames that fit around your monitor. There are over fifty designs to choose from ranging from a space station to a rainforest. They're simple to use, too - just peel off the velcro pads and stick 'em on. They should hit computer and stationery stores soon-ish.

ALIVE & KICKING

Quick, get your diary. Got it? Right, what are you doing from the 16th to the 20th of September? Nothing? Well, how about popping along to Live '93, the Consumer Electronics Show, at The Olympia Exhibition Centre, London? Fancy it? Well, absolutely everybody's going to be there and you might even learn something at one of the many masterclasses and seminars dealing with a wide range of tasty subjects - from electronic keyboard skills to the latest photographic techniques. Sounds great to us, although obviously not quite as good (or as video-gamerelated) as our very own Second Future Entertainment Show, which you may have noticed us mentioning a bit recently.

When it comes to suburban commando ing, he's the mildly street-credible hulk.

"Hello, son, what's that you're playing?" "Why do you always have to kill things?" And of course, "Which one am I?" If that's pretty much the level of parental interest that video games get in your house, then Alternative's new selection of ultracheap 'Games For Dads' re-releases might be just what you need.

HAT'S MY DAD

Intended to "encourage the use of the home computer by all the family", the range will include the "top-selling" football management sim, Tracksuit Manager, three licences - Jaws, The Munsters, and William Tell - a platformer, High Steel, and the "classic beat-'em-up", Fallen Angel. Now, you'll probably notice that these are hardly the most up-to-date cutting-edge Amiga titles around, and you'd be right. Still, they are only £4.99 each -'Again Again' is the brand name for you (or your Dad) to look out for if you're at all tempted by the prospect.

This month's other hot newsy

Alternative's newies are for families. Well, maybe not The Addams Family...

titbit from Alternative is that their exclusive mid-price licence, Suburban Commando (featuring Hulk Hogan), should be out soon in two forms - the normal game pack, and a special 'added value' version that includes a video of the full theatrical version of the movie. So, if you've got two TVs, say, it wouldn't be impossible to double your Hulk Hogan-ing enjoyment by watching the film and playing the game at the same time. Or something like that, anyway.

Last month will not go down as one of the finest for Amiga games ever. But it's good to see that some people made an effort, anyway.

SOCCER KID (Krisalis)

Okay, so it's just a platform game, but Soccer Kid takes all the best bits from all the top platform games you've ever heard of (and that includes the much-feared Mario and Sonic as well as more obvious reference points like Arabian Nights) and welds them together with a footballing theme to produce an awesome whole which feels and plays like almost nothing else in existence. Football fans will love it, platform fans will love it, we love it and hey - we think you're going to love it too.

BLOB (Core)

It's a platform puzzle game at heart, is Blob, but vou've never seen a platform puzzle game quite like this before. Genuinely frightening 3D gets you bouncing on the edge of your seat as the cute and plucky Putty-like star of the title sways and bobs on the edge of infinity. And, er, jumps around on some platforms as well. Not only is this one of the most original Amiga games we've seen in donkey's years, but it's also one of the most lovable. And that's always a good thing, we find.

ONE STEP BEYOND (Ocean)

Despite the continued non-appearance of our free boxes of Quavers, professional pride prevents us from taking out our hunger-induced misery on this quite literally pretty good platformy puzzle game. Colin Curly gets up to all sorts of contortions to convince the casual player that he's got some kind of relevance to the plot, but at the end of the day it's the addictive gameplay that gets you coming back for more. More salt'n' vinegar flavour, that is.

THE ADDAMS FAMILY (The Hit Squad)

Not too many puzzles to be found here, but there're platforms aplenty in the Amiga's closest Mario clone to date. Technically unimpressive, The Addams Family succeeds through simple, addictive gameplay and a finelytuned difficulty curve that always offers just enough progress to keep you plugging away. It's pretty tricky, too, and at this budget price you'll be getting more fun-perpound than a Bernard Manning fan at a benefit gig. Urgh, horrible idea.

SYNDICATE (Electronic Arts)

Hang on a minute, this hasn't got any platforms in it. What's it doing in here? Steward! Eject this game from the premises forthwith! What? You say it's one of the most atmospheric and obsessively addictive strategy experiences ever, blending outrageous violence with gameplay depth and a great plot to unhealthily gripping effect? Well., all right. It can stay for now. But if it gets rowdy and starts upsetting the ladies, it's out on its ear, okay?

YO! JOE! (Hudson Soft)

It's not, at the moment, absolutely the easiest game to get a hold of in your local UK software emporium, but the ancient Celtic philosophers of Tir Nan Og used to say "Man does not value what he comes by too easily", and rarely has an entirely made-up proverb rung more true than when applied to this superb platform game. And look, it's not our fault that all the good games around just now happen to be platformers, alright? So just get off our case. okay? (Steady on. - Ed)

ESS

Celebrate our incompetence in... YSTERY SCREENSHOT CORNER

Hi there, art fans. Now, those of you expecting to see the all-new-and-improved 'In The Style Of' feature down here are in for an extra special treat, as for once (and once only) it's dramatically swollen to over eight times its natural size, and can now be found frolicking gaily across the two-page spread on p66-67. Replacing it (again in a strictly one-off capacity, you understand) is AP's very own tribute to down-to-earth honesty and frankness - MYSTERY SCREENSHOT CORNER.

Briefly, the scenario is that every magazine office has a load of excellent pictures that have mysteriously become separated from the rest of their press release details. Now, most mags are too scared to print these pics since they'd also have to admit that they didn't have a bleeding clue what they were supposed to be illustrating. But not us. We just don't care. And to prove it, here's this month's ... MYSTERY SCREENSHOT!

What's going on here then? Maybe it's some sort of chaos game. Maybe it's one of those rave demos featuring that much-underused colour cycling effect. Or maybe it's just the long-awaited 'Tales Of The Unexpected' licence from Roald Dahl (Deceased) Enterprises. Anyway, if you have any idea, write in to us at the usual editorial address, making sure to mark your letter Sorry Stu - I Thought This Would Come Out Funnier'.

Incidentally, just in case anyone's keeping track of these things, last month's Mystery Screenshot turned out to be Cybernator, from Konami, on the SNES. What were we doing with a picture of a SNES game? God knows. Anyway, it was correctly identified by Jason Newington of Eastbourne, who'll be receiving some sort of mystery prize in the near future. Or will he? Who can tell? After all, the laws of science and journalism break down when you dare to enter MYSTERY SCREENSHOT CORNER. Yes.

ALIEN BREED 2

A collection of random graphic sets or the bonus slidey puzzle level section? You decide.

Game: Alien Breed 2 Publisher: Team 17 Authors: Andreas Tadik, Rico Holmes, Martyn Brown, Allister Brimble ETA: Mid October

Briefly: Two score months and four ago, Team 17 begat Alien Breed, and the people did admire it, for it was good. Thus spake the players: "We like it, but you can't shoot through the doors." So Team 17 begat Alien Breed '92. And it was good. And the players did buy this budget bestseller for month upon month, and couldn't get enough of the overhead-viewed alienblasting entertainment, and thus spake Team 17: "If this is what the players want, we must begat Alien Breed 2." And Martyn Brown spake thus: "Make it so."

f today will be yesterday tomorrow, then today's forthcoming games may be classics by, oh, Friday week.

The creators speak: It came to pass that thy humble scribe did talk to the Brown of Martyn across the mighty telephonic void, and though he was mightily fearful of Team 17's reputation of being able to drink more than a skinful in a big and hard and clever manner, he did question the Wakefield-based programmer. "We have more phone calls about when Alien Breed 2's coming out than anything else, so we obviously came up with what the public wanted with the first two Alien Breed games. Because of this, we can't see any reason to change the basic gameplay. We've never discussed how many levels we're going to have, but I reckon that Alien Breed 2 will be about three times the size of the original. We're planning on just filling the game as much as we can until we get to a cut-off point just before we release it. "Though it's still a two-"More stuff,

"Though it's still a twoplayer game, there's going to be more stuff, better stuff and lots of everything.

There's more than a touch of Gauntlet-style overhead-view adventuring... There's more colour and guns and levels and everything. What more could a dichard Alien Breed fan ask for?

There are new and improved aliens, a new armoury full of weaponry and a new and improved Intex system. Even though you'll have weapons like homing rockets and grenades, it won't make it easier as there are things like automatic gun turrets and proximity mines to get in your way.

"We're working simultaneously on A1200 and standard Amiga versions, and as well as more colours, we were hoping for a zooming effect similar to the SNES Mode 7 for the A1200, but this is still a bit dodgy at the moment. This would just be the icing on the cake though, as both versions are going to be something special."

Verdict so far: When the voice of the Brown of Martyn had faded away through the ether, the humble scribe cast off his lowly disguise and proclaimed his verdict. And it was a terrifying verdict, and the world did listen. For he was one of the mightiest beings ever to produce a computer magazine, and he spake thus: "If you liked Alien Breed, then you are destined to be in for a right royal knees-up, for it will be the same thing only bigger, better and flashier. Oh yes." • MARK WINSTANLEY

Pretty, huh? The thing is, these are all PC screen shots, but DiD oromise a similar level of ushness on the Amiga.

Game: TFX Publisher: Ocean Authors: Digital Image Design ETA: Early '94

Briefly: DiD have just signed up a development deal with Ocean worth about £1 million (!), so it's no surprise that Managing Director Martin Kenwright has the flashiest business card I've ever seen. They're stamped metal with lots of little holes and lines cut in them. They're excellent, and I want one. But, sadly, I was only allowed a few seconds to marvel at this little miracle before Martin launched enthusiastically into his demonstration.

The creators speak: I asked Martin how long it would be before ... "We're up to a beta-test version of TFX on the PC at the moment, and the Amiga version's not too far behind that. TFX stands for Tactical Fighter eXperiment, and the game's set in the near future. Things are going pretty badly, with famine and civil wars raging across Somalia and the former Yugoslavia and the threat of nuclear war increasing as Libya works towards gaining the Bomb. Obviously many of these

"As well as single missions and trainer modes, there's a tour-ofduty selection where you fly an entire campaign, and also six 'soap opera' polygons per scenarios where the missions are linked by second without cinematic sequences to form a complete story, any slowing and feature real people such as George Bush and Colonel Colin Powell, If you've had enough of the 160 pre-set missions, then you can always go into the UN Commander mode, where you can develop your own missions. Using satellite views, you check out ground targets and technical specs of ... "We realised early on that the game was beyond the capabilities of the standard Amiga, so this is going to be for the A1200 and CD32 only. We've found that with 128 colours we can still have up to 3,000 polygons per second without any slowing down, which is perfectly adequate. For most of the game we use a simple flight model, but we've also had help from Rod Kennedy from Glasgow University and Professor Curtis, the Head of Aeronautics at

Small things press small minds, but I really liked the wing tip vapour rail. Go figure

They've been working on the most realistic flight model ever seen on a home computer. It's all based on moments of inertia (Basic physics principles, tech fans. -Ed) and uses variables such as wing crosssection and thrust to work out how the plane flies.

This requires masses of processing power, so this'll only be available on the Somalian mission, as this has the minimum of ground detail."

as well as missiles and flak. Bombs and missiles cause water plumes instead of explosions when they hit the surface, ships leave wakes, and tanks kick up dust in the desert scenarios. And then there's the laser-guided bombs and the video playback and the Verdict so far: "It's a huge, multi-faceted game, and ... Shut up, Martin. TFX looks awesome on the PC, but there's still a lot of work to go before we see an Amiga version working fully. Martin reckons that it's going to push the A1200 to its limit, so here's hoping the game lives up to the hype MARK WINSTANLEY

Romper stomp. Romper stomp. Put the boot in – clomp clomp clomp.

Game: Brutal Sports Football Publisher: Millennium Programmers: Pete Jefferies, Alistair Mann, Colin Hughes and Tony Hager at Teque ETA: October

Briefly: Brutal Sports Football – original name BeastBall – is the first in a series of intended Brutal Sports games from those harder-than-hard (so hard they don't even wear white socks) East End of London Pet Cemetery Shop Boys who call themselves 'Teque'. BSF is a cartoon-can just hack the heads off of the opposing team with a scimitar. Lovely stuff, eh? The creators speak: I kicked off by acking the Torus hour if they were in:

asking the Teque boys if they were in: (a) jail (b) mental hospital (c) traction, or (d) court. With a neat sidestep worthy of Detroit's man-eating Lion – Barry Saunders – they answered: (e) debt.

Assuming that this debt is a debt to society, don't they think that the gratuitous brutality could end up being emulated by some of the sadder elements of the gameplaying fraternity?

"BSF may encourage high-spirited (but spotty) youths to attempt to lob off enormous green lizards' heads with huge razor-sharp scimitars, and then kick the aforementioned green heads across the local car park, but this is a risk we're prepared to take."

So now we're getting more of an insight into the brutally anaesthetic workings of Teque programmers. Curiosity piqued, I had to find out more about their background. "What sort of childhood did you guys have? Were you brought up on a diet of raw meat and fried babies?" I asked, fearlessly.

"We all went to comprehensive schools," they cheerily replied.

'em-up"

After quick consultation with Tim Norris, ex-AP Prod Ed and flamboyant product of the public school system, he explained "Well, it's the same thing, really. From what I hear comprehensives serve their babies boiled nowadays, though." All this talk of comprehensives and violence brings us neatly onto the Nietzschean issue of philosophy – "Is there a philosophy behind Brutal Sports?"

"The original idea was to produce a game that was as original as possible, without being too far out to be easily understood. BSF fits the bill exactly – as soon as you see it you know what it is, you don't have to wade through a manual to play it, but it does incorporate superb graphics and wacky features (like the walking ball power-up). The game wasn't going to be this violent, but as we progressed we liked the violence so much we decided to make it an integral part of the game – it's now 50% football and 50% beat-'emi-up, with another 50% humour."

Satiated with blood, although not quite sure if 150% is a relevant score for a game, I gave the guys a final chance to cauterise any wounds that my fax may have opened up.

"The finished game will have a league structure and four species of beasts, to give the game plenty of depth, but we won't do much more with the game itself, it's too good to risk tampering with!" Verdict so far: Things are looking good. The animation is really smooth, the humour is wacky, and the gratuitous violence is particularly good. If you want to play or fight against the computer or a friend, Brutal Sports Football is going to be one to look out for. • STEVE McGILL

Game: Campaign 2 Publisher: Empire Software Authors: In house ETA: October

Briefly: Campaign was a phenomenally successful (and ground-breaking) strategy-cum-arcade wargame that received a whopping great 83% when reviewed in issue 20 of AP. Big claims were being made by Empire Software for Campaign 2. Sniffing out a good story's what we're all about at AP, so no expense spared, I was guickly dispatched to beautiful Oxford to find out the wargames and wargamers have been saddled with the same sort of charismatic image as receipt-ticket folders and statistics collectors. Campaign broke the mould by appealing to the potential Rommel or Mannstein in us all (Okay, wrong side but they did have the 'stylish' uniforms and style's what counts in today's MTV culture, isn't it kids? (We don't know. What are you talking about? -The Kids). Not only could you direct overall battle strategy at the macroscopic end of the military spectrum (If you don't start using some one- and two-syllable words pretty damn smartish, there'll be a P45 with your name on it in the intercontinental postal information transportation infrastructure. - Ed), but on a smaller, more personal scale, you could also engage in individual 3D animated polygonal armoured combat.

We got guns, we got tanks, we're off to kill good old Tom Hanks.

This approach proved to be a very lucrative one for Empire, and Campaign sold loads. Forward-looking and evolutionary, they didn't stop there.

The creators speak: Empire's aptly-named Richard Yapp did most of the talking while I was there, so I'll just leave it to him, shall I? "One of the main criticisms we received from gamer feedback was the lack of formation discipline when engaging enemy tanks at the individual level, ie it was every man for himself."

"Having a progressive and acted on the criticisms. Military commanders were sought, interrogated and squeezed to get a better hierarchy of command and battle formation. "There are now several approaches at different levels of command. You can take charge of the whole campaign and direct your armies, or take control of an army and issue orders to the divisions within it and so forth, all the way down the line to individual units."

Polygon or not, this tank's got a very big gun.

M3 Halftrack

Driving individual tanks is also smoother thanks to more efficient 3D handling routines. As mentioned earlier, tank platoons keep formation. If the vehicle you're driving is knocked out, you are automatically transferred to the next tank which is rapidly promoted to Platoon Commander. And infantry, noticeable by their absence in the first Campaign, now grace the battlefield as do Armoured Personnel Carriers to transport them. You can fly aircraft too, keeping battle formation in a similar manner to the tanks.

If these improvements have you drooling like one of Pavlov's famous psychological dogs, then mop up your chin and prepare for more. Rich again: "All combat scenarios from 1945 to the present day can be simulated. There are over 100 new vehicles of war all the way from WW2 to the present day. Predefined maps come as part of the package, eg Korea in the '50s, the Six Day War in the '70s and the Gulf War in the '90s. As with Campaign, maps can be edited to create any scenario you wish. All nationalities in the game have hierarchical templates to allow real divisions, and regiments etc to be deployed in the maps. These can be edited at any level with a new easy-to-use Cut/Copy/Paste option." Verdict so far: Well, let me put it like this. The command structure has been radically altered due to the extensive military advice received. The addition of infantry, modern weaponry, more realistic individual battle formations and post-World War Two scenarios should result in Campaign 2 being a true evolution of its parent game. Hurrah, as I believe I'm contractually obliged to say. • STEVE McGILL

Game: Lamborghini World Challenge Publisher: Titus Authors: In house ETA: December

Briefly: It's Crazy Cars 3, souped up and with a two-player option. The creators speak: I tracked down Steve Darragh from Titus in his used car lot on the outskirts of Hackney, and when I arrived he was in the back shed "Steve's finishing off a blue paint job on a white Porsche garage is not 911. He seemed alarmed at my initial line listed in the of questioning, namely Yellow Pages" why the front and back number plates were different, and seemed desperate to know whether I'd brought an elderly gentleman called Bill with me, but once he'd padlocked the shed, he calmed down a bit.

It was a year ago that Crazy Cars 3 came out to much acclaim, although it took until May this year for it to gain its highest accolade by coming 10th in the AMIGA POWER All-Time Top 100. To even have its name mentioned within our hallowed offices is usually praise enough for most games, so to be perched so high up our list must be the computer equivalent of canonisation. I mentioned this to Steve, and together we reminisced on the fine points of Crazy Cars 3. I thought the best bit was the hair-raising speed and the way that it unrealistically bounced into the air in an entirely arcadey way, but Steve reckoned that it was the twenty fearsomely intelligent computer cars who do their darnedest to either block you or smash you off the road. It may not be the most detailed sprite-based racing game on the Amiga, but the one thing we could both agree on was that it's certainly the fastest. What prompted this chin-wag about great games of yesteryear? Well, over roasted chestnuts and a steaming mug of tea from a hot coal brazier, Steve informed me that the reason I'd been asked down was that Titus have been working Crazv Cars 3 over with either a fine-tooth comb or a baseball bat (he was mixing his metaphors and being none too specific) and the end result is the soon-to-be-released Lamborghini World Challenge. Despite all the good press, Crazy Cars 3 didn't sell very well, which Steve attributed to the fact that, at the time, Titus was a pretty small company. Now they're got the power to advertise and distribute further, they're taking time out to tweak it up a bit, add the two-player option and, of course, the impressive Lamborghini moniker.

He was keen to point out that although Lamborghini World Challenge isn't strictly a new game, it's only had one previous owner, got a fairly low mileage, and all the rust on the sill bottom's nothing to worry about.

I thanked Steve, but was more than a tad surprised to find that the company car I'd arrived in now had a 'Nice Little Runner - £3,995' sticker across the windscreen

and was about to be testdriven by a surly youth from Battersea. Steve laughed this off as a genuine mistake, so I accepted his apology and drove home, although I couldn't help but notice that the car seemed to be running a tad hesitantly. This worried me so much that I stopped at a garage just outside Bath to discover that the 2-litre fuel-injected engine had mysteriously transformed into what the mechanic informed me was one from a 1973 Ford Escort Mk 2. I have since discovered that 'Steve's Garage' is not listed in the Yellow Pages, and the number he gave me on his business card is that of a Tandoori takeaway in Peckham. Hmm.

Verdict so far: It looks like it's going to be Crazy Cars 3, only souped up and with a two-player option. MARK WINSTANLEY pretty inhuman not to. That's enough of the Dr Who jokes, anyway.

After all that, please don't ask who's Who. If there's any questions going to be asked, they're going to be asked by me. The creators spoke: The plot of K240 is set in a cluster of asteroid fields known as the Magellenic Cloud licensed out by the Terran Empire to independent miners who try to form ore extraction colonies. First question to Gremlin. All this talk of independents makes me think of disaffected youth who like to twang guitars a lot and share their depression. Is this the role I'm expected to play? "You play the role of one such independent who has recently established a pioneering colony in an uninhabited section of the Magellenic Cloud. However, as you expand your operation strange phenomena occur." Hmm, strange phenomena could this be a euphemism for 'I've lost some craft and I'm not alone'? "At first vou dismiss the loss of your scout craft as an accident. Only when a similar ship begins to probe your craft do

leading to an identity crisis: who am I, what are my objectives and how should I manage myself?

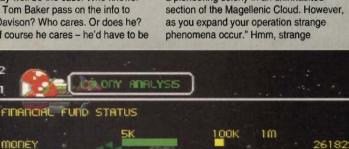

"You are the Commander of an ore extraction colony and you have several objectives, all of which must be carefully managed if you are to successfully mine the Magellenic Cloud."

1 Identity crisis over, I then had to find out my brief. "First and foremost your brief is to explore the Magellenic Cloud, enlarge your colony and expand your mining operations so you can extract more ore and sell it to the Empire." This all sounds a bit technologically-orientated, doesn't it, guys? What will I have to do to maintain my newly-founded colonies? "In order to maintain the day-to-day running of the colony you'll need to invest time and money into scientific research. New inventions will enable you to enhance productivity, thus providing adequate supplies for your workforce." I can't imagine things running this smoothly, there's bound to be hassle from the enemies out there. Just what is going to be paramount to my success? "Controlling the enemy forces will be paramount to your success. By collating data received from your spy-ships you will have to make the final decisions as to how your colony will cope with the alien threat". Excellent advice. I think I've got a bit of military judgement too. How should I use it? "Use your military judgement to hold the enemy at bay or annihilate him from the system." Sounds pretty final to me. Verdict so far: Fans of the first Utopia game (which this is a kind of sequel to) and the like may well be interested in this game. But then again, they might not be. The plot has the same sort of ring to it but not the same tone. It's set in space and this in itself might just be enough to help sell lots of copies. Who knows for sure? (Don't start that again. - Ed) • STEVE McGILL

Game: Beneath The Steel Skies Publisher: Virgin Authors: Revolution ETA: November

Briefly: Foster's life in the wasteland known as The Gap is brought violently to an end when armed guards from the city kidnap him and kill his family. Why is he so important, why does the robot security system save his life by blowing away a guard and who is the mysterious Overman? The team that brought us the rather lovely Lure Of The Temptress have all the answers.

speak: The team at Revolution are hugely critical of their previous work, not because they think it wasn't very good, but because they see it as the best way to improve.

"Beneath The Steel Skies has taken 10 people a year to write so far, and we've had five independent playtesters writing this sort of thing at every stage," said Managing Director Charles Cecil, waving a huge wodge of faxes which contain comments, criticisms and suggestions. Charles admitted that the criticism can be a bit discouraging at times, but he reckons it's the best way to iron out all problems.

The most press-worthy feature of the game is the involvement of top comic artist Dave Gibbons, who drew the excellent Watchmen and Give Me Liberty. "Dave was very receptive to our ideas on how things should look," said Charles. "We'd already spent a lot of time working on a complete background for the game, which we gave Dave along with the requirements of each location, such as the numbers of doors and windows. He then drew a sixpage comic, and about 75 black-and-white drawings, which were copied and painted by us. These paintings were then scanned to form the backdrops, since we've found that it's the only way to get such an impressively large amount of detail into the pictures." gets smashed Charles was keen to point out their game up before too engine, which has been developed in-house. "We realise that we're up against Sierra and LucasArts, but they've been using the same engine for about a decade now. We've got the most sophisticated game engine in the world, which allows incidental characters to 'live' even when you can't see them, so rather than standing around until you talk to them, they'll wander off into other locations. You can also look through windows into other locations, increasing the feeling that you're in a real world rather than a collection of locations.

For instance, Foster's helped by Joey the robot, who starts the game as a circuit board after his destruction. Throughout the game he helps you out as a cleaning droid, a welder, a medic and an android, but he invariably gets smashed up before too long. "Foster's got to work his way down from the high-up industrial sections to the more bijou ground levels, and work his way through a cyberspace level in the city computer, but we've made it as non-linear as possible. Obviously there are certain nodes where all the events come together, but in many cases there are several ways to get to each of them, and you can. We've left out red-herring objects, but since some of them are specific to certain puzzles, it'll appear to players that some of them are useless. We've made sure that there aren't any coincidences in the game, because they appear false to the player, and although it's possible to get killed, it'll always be obvious why you copped it." Verdict so far: With the standard Amiga version looking stunning and the 256-colour A1200 version being identical to the PC version, there's no doubt that it's going to look fab, but by having an actual story line rather than the usual nonspecific 'kill the baddie' plotline, I reckon this is going to play pretty fantastically too. The only possible downer I can imagine will be the size of it (the game comes on 12 or so disks), so it looks like you're going to need a hard drive to get the most out of it. G MARK WINSTANLEY

> Henry Moore is a dead sculptor, and isn't at all related to Alan Moore, who wrote Watchmen.

Brief factual interlude: This is the Link section that takes place inside the computer. It's surreal.

"He

long"

Get out now before it's too LATE! Okay, back to wibbling, and Foster fails to appreciate the intrinsic beauty of a Henry Moore sculpture.

"We dig TV, we dig remote control. We dig the Furry Freak Brothers and the Twilight Zone." But it's not just tragically-ahead-of-their-time dancegrebo crossover bands who prefer certain items over other ones. Indeed not.

JUST WHO DO WE THINK WE ARE?

LINDA BARKER

Much to Dave's glee, Linda's returned to the AP fold this month, bringing Stuart's megalomaniacally despotic rule to an abrupt end. On doctor's orders, Linda's been doing lots of things she enjoys, which mainly seems to involve being frequently driven to Gloucester to buy packs of Corn Pops. It's undeniably strange behaviour, but since it's so good to see her back again, we don't ask awkward questions.

STUART CAMPBELL

A few months ago Stuart proclaimed that his rule over AMIGA POWER would last a thousand years, but with Linda's recovery, his dreams have been ruthlessly shattered. It's also brought to an end his 'Jurassic' phase (though not before the unfortunate destruction of several Nissan Landcruisers) – she's insisting that he views strictly Disney from now on.

SAL MEDDINGS

In fact, he can go round to Sal's house and take advantage of her delightful Little Mermaid lampshades and her quintessentially beautiful 'Pull My Head To Make Me Speak' Mickey Mouse doll. Maybe the presence of Sal's little 'un will have a beneficial effect, or maybe we should wait till he's completely over his carnivorous stage...

DAVE GOLDER

Strangely believing that the '70s were the height of TV drama, Dave went to one of those wild 'Cult TV' conventions recently, and ended up being detained overnight in a cell containing fellow delegates dressed as Sapphire and Steel, a dalek, three Commander Datas and Bodie from The Professionals. Dave proved his own worst enemy when he appeared in court the next morning – cunningly disguised as the voluptuous Jenna from out of Blake's Seven.

STEVE McGILL

Our new boy, Steve, has been busy settling in, getting to know the area and checking out the amenities. He now knows where Hatchetts is, where the Cellar Bar is, and so on. But ask him to pop to Sainsbury's and a sort of vacant, confused look crosses his face. Ah well, at least Jacquie will have a regular visitor in her 'special' room.

LISA KELLETT

Bearing in mind the amount of fan mail she gets in the form of 'Lisa, will you marry me' letters from our readers, it seems strange that Lisa's ambitions to be Miss Bristol 1993 were tragically cut short at the semi-final stage. Perhaps readers of the Bristol Evening Post just don't appreciate Somerset-and-Avon's very own homegirl as much as AMIGA POWER followers.

TIM TUCKER

Following his tragic and fatal accident last month, Tim's been clumsily re-animated using an eclectic blend of Haitian Voodoo rites, industrial fertilisers and household electrical appliances. Until we release him from his zombie state, Tim's now destined to shamble around, mindlessly following our orders. Fortunately, we needed someone for this month's feature on game music, and who (or indeed what) better than an exnear-pop star, undead, ex-staff writer? Take it away, Tim.

RICH PELLEY Rich has been taking a well-earned break this month and claims that he's been to America. We got a postcard but "Hello, I'm having a really great time," was the extent of the message. Since he also delivered it by hand when he got back, it didn't have a stamp or postmark on it, so frankly we're not convinced that he's been anywhere near 'The Land Of The Free'. Anyway, regardless of whether he bought them in Woolworths or South Central Los Angeles, the jelly beans he bought us were much appreciated. Cheers Rich.

DAVE GREEN

Dave's been shouting a lot more than usual. Y'see, he's taken to frequenting very loud nightclubs for the dual purposes of appearing more human and what he mysteriously refers to as 'gaining fresh nutrients.' As a result of his nocturnal activities, the missing persons list in Bath has suddenly increased alarmingly, and it seems that all that loud music has damaged something. His legs if his dancing's anything to go by.

TIM NORRIS

Genealogy's been the name of the game for the Norris clan this month – Tim's managed to trace his ancestry back to 1628, where it appears the first Norris was the offspring of a young peasant girl and King Charles himself. It appears that young Percy Norris rose to the rank of Captain in the Royalist army, and quite frankly the office's latest Roundhead recruit (see below) isn't taking this too well at all.

MARK WINSTANLEY

It came as no real surprise to the rest of the team when the company psychiatrist judged Mark to be "An unbalanced sociopath with violent tendencies." Consequently, Mark's on the same cartoon diet as Stuart, though we still have to keep a strict eye on him. All that violent Tom 'n' Jerry stuff is out, it's strictly Bambi and Dumbo from now on.

JONATHAN DAVIES

Jonathan's taken his wargaming a step further this month by joining the Sealed Knot society, a band of muddy funsters dedicated to re-enacting the English Civil War. Squire Jon Merryweather, as he now styles himself, has proclaimed himself a Roundhead, and to prove his puritanical ways, has given up the one thing in life that gives him any pleasure at all – his exact 1/35th scale plastic model Stegosaurus. In a satchel.

game, simply. Yes, I think that's it. I was talking to a few of my glamorous international game-playing chums the other day (well, a couple of part-time freelance writers for console magazines, anyway), and while we argued bitterly about the merits of Kick Off, Asteroids, Epic, Rainbow Islands and International Rugby Challenge, there was one thing we all agreed on, and that was that without exception, the best games in the world are the ones where something's done simply.

Micro Machines is a Super Sprinttype overhead-view circuit racing game, dressed up a bit with some unusual backgrounds but with no shocking gameplay innovations beyond a fairly novel two-player mode. It's technically nothing clever, either - the game originated on the 8-bit NES, and it's only been updated in the graphics department since then, and even there not as much as you might expect. And annoyingly, the Amiga lags behind the Mega Drive version in a couple of technical aspects, like the lack of a parallax-scrolling floor beneath the table-top levels and some missing graphical details on a couple of the stages.

But who cares, eh? On with the old tosh. Micro Machines features 24 courses across eight different types of scenery (plus a set of bonus levels which you get to play every time you win three races, where you can get some extra lives), through which you race against a variable selection from the game's 11 variably skilled drivers. You can race in four amusingly different ways – one-player challenge mode (you take on three computer players at a time, gradually eliminating them and choosing new table-top action - mind those clunky pool balls.

In all of Micro Machines' headto-head games, the basic principle is that you and one other player (computer or human, or even your dog if it's unusually dextrous and well co-ordinated and heavily into racing games, I suppose) race around a track as normal, except that instead of just trying to get round quicker than the other guy (or dog), you're simply trying to put enough space between you over a short distance that the scrolling of the course overtakes your opponent and he (or it) disappears off screen. When this happens, the player in front wins a point and the one who was forced off the screen loses a point (you start with four each), and when the score gets to 8-0 either way, the game's up.

It's a brilliant way of circumventing many of the problems usually found in twoplayer race games of this ilk (like, say, Supercars 2, where the screen gets split to show both cars, but then inevitably gives each one such a tiny field of vision as to make spotting corners and so on practically impossible), but it's not without mishaps either. In one-player head-tohead, the scrolling actually follows the car behind, so that to win a point you actually have to race off the edge of the screen yourself. What this means, naturally ahead of the computer player, you end up with about two pixels' warning of upcoming corners, which kind of knackers all the good of the idea in the first place.

But hey, what kind of a saddo plays head-to-head games against the computer? This was always meant to be a game played by two real people (talented dogs notwithstanding), and as such it works like a dream. The extra-specially great thing about the two-player game, though, is that there's so much variation in it - you can race the fast and relatively hazard-free sandpit tracks where it's just a simple all-out speed trial, the obstaclestrewn pool tables where negotiating the pool balls, playing-card ramps and secret tunnels concealed in pockets adds an element of maze navigation to the proceedings, the precarious desktop levels where your lightning-quick but nearuncontrollable sports car goes plunging off the table to its doom on every other corner, or the slow-moving but brilliant toyroom tank levels, where every time your opponent gets in front of you, you can

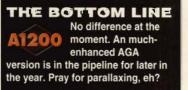

And what do you know? I haven't even touched on the super fantasticness of the graphic locations yet, have I? Well, they're just - oh, out of room again. Damn. STUART CAMPBELL

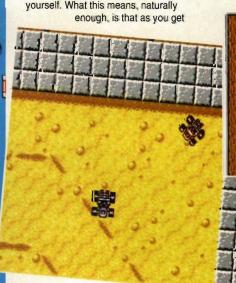

UPPERS Great locations, great control, great selection of game variations... well, it's just great. Alright?

DOWNERS Not having the parallax scrolling for the floors leaves things looking a bit shoddy. And the scrolling on the one-player head-to-head mode is a bit overly demanding. The oneplayer modes in general are a bit limited, in fact,

Game: Diggers Publisher: Millennium Author: Toby Simpson Price: £29.99 Release: September

ow don't switch off because I'm going to mention Sega and the Mega Drive and all those posh console things, because I'm making a valid point here, so pay attention. Back when the Mega Drive was released, everyone went 'Ooh' and 'Ahh' over its sleek black case and impressive 16-bit credentials, but practically no-one bought them. You could argue that everyone was waiting to see if it caught on or not, since no one wanted to end up with the videogaming equivalent of a Betamax video recorder, but we know that the real reason was that all the games were crap. Altered Beast? Altered Cack, more like.

It was only when that funny hedgehog and his cool sneakers hit the shops 18 months later that the console craze began. For once though, Commodore seem to be on the ball, and although we've only been allowed to speculate about it for the last few months, it turns out that most of the top games producers have been developing for the CD32 for ages. So, even though the the risk of machine's just been officially finished, we've your miners now got the first-ever CD32-specific release in the form of Diggers. Altered Beast Part Deux, or Sonic 3? Read on.

Okay, so with the CD32 version you get loads of flash stuff that's far beyond the dreams of mortal

Amiga owners. Rather than having a bulging manual, all the instructions are actually in the game, with more than 100 pages of info presented guite nicely in the form of a big book. There's also a moody CD soundtrack, which is suitably ambient

LECERCIE!

It's such a shame that the characters spend most of their time underground, because it means they miss out on lovely moon-sets such as this. Ahhhhh.

enough to not get annoying after a few minutes, so you can dig away for hours to gentle new-age muzak. Finally, there's the fact that the game comes on a CD, so you can promise to bring it round to your friend's house and then ask him smugly where his CD32 is, secure in the knowledge that he hasn't got one. Oneupmanship, I love it. And I can do it far, far better than Stuart. (No you can't, and I can beat you at Pinball Fantasies, you girl. Stuart) (Or any game for that matter, corduroy pants wearer. - Stuart, again) Onto the game then, and digging is, quite obviously, the name of the game. Set on the planet Zarg, you control a digging quintuplet formed from one of four races. Each race has differing levels of stamina, patience and strength, and some have very odd mannerisms, which I'll go into later. Your team starts off next to their home base on the surface, and the idea's to collect a set number of credits before your enemy does.

Here it is - the first ever CD32-specific Characters panic convincingly when they fall in water. d then they drown.

Remember when you were a kid and you wandered down to the seaside with a plastic spade and dug a little hole? Well, these boys sneer at your puny efforts.

Although you can only wander around the surface for a short stretch, the potential for wandering about underground is almost limitless - not infinite, but so close that you'll hardly notice. Millennium claim 34 levels spread over seven different terrain types, and that you could complete the game by seeing only a quarter of the million or so locations, and I can well believe them. You get credits by selling jewels, and you find jewels by digging tunnels. Miles and miles of tunnels.

The basic digging machines are your five miners, who will merrily dig in a specified direction until they hit solid rock, or get bored. When jewels are found, you have to instruct someone to pick them up, and then get them back to the base so you can trade them in. Thankfully, there's no need to negotiate them through the mines, as you can whoosh them back to the surface using teleportation. Once you've title. Is it a case of great excavations?

You know, the really clever thing about Diggers is that you actually create most of the playing area yourself, so each game's going to be vastly different. In true children's TV style, here's one I did earlier, and there isn't even an enemy miner in sight. Ha.

got cash, you can expand the scale of the operation with vertical tunnel borers, mining machines, boats, trains, explosives, bridges and all manner of gear. Obviously, this costs money, so you've got to work out whether buying a lift is more important than getting to your credit goal quickly.

التحر ملك

All this would be far too easy without some traumas. and the main one's the fact that there's another set of miners out there doing exactly the same thing. This can work out guite nicely if you can dig into their network and grab jewels before they do, but since different races fight each other, you run the risk of your miners getting kicked in if you connect rival networks.

The second problem are the creatures that lurk in the many caves you get to. Many of the caves are cleverly designed puzzles, where you've got to buy bridge sections and lifts in order to get to the really large jewel caches, but most of them are also guarded by spooks, ghouls and alien monsters who at best scare your team, and at worst kill them.

The final problem is your tunnel network itself, which requires so much thought to plan that my head literally exploded after one particular three-hour stint. The diggers can only go up angled slopes, can't jump over vertical shafts and will always find the lowest part of the tunnel network by falling down the shafts, so you This bashed-up often find that by and, quite frankly, digging a new tunnel, fat guy appears in you'll have blocked off access to large sections of the existing network.

Now all of these are taxing, game-related puzzles that improve, enhance and indeed are the main bulk of the game, but there are problems with Diggers that are nothing to do with enjoyment. It seems that the programmers got so wrapped up in the game that they never stopped to consider how the game would appear to any newcomers, and most of my gripes are related to this

The four mining races on Zarg come under the curious headings of Grabblins, F'Targ, Quarriors and Habbish, who're the ones that look like lanky Jawas.

Frases

In all their splendour and glory, here are the 34 levels - count 'em!

you try to use the flashy new CD32 console-type controller rather than a bogstandard mouse. If you saw that one of your guys was heading towards a extremely deep shaft that would doubtlessly end his promising career in mining, then you'd have to first click on either him or his number, then press the right mouse button to get his menu up, then on the walk icon to get the walk menu up, then finally the stop button, by which time he's probably dead anyway. You've got to go through a similar hassle to teleport out, when the logical thing would

There's Habbish and Quarriors and mining machines and hidden grottos and fossils and quite literally EVERYTHING in this picture.

"I've been have been to have a 'stop playing it everything' and 'teleport out' buttons next to the for hours on end" number of the character. A floaty number above each of them is missing as well, since when they're all on the same screen, it's difficult to tell them apart.

The different races have different characteristics and a certain degree of artificial intelligence, but unfortunately it's entirely misplaced. If they're walking towards a deep pool or a gang of enemy miners, they won't think about turning back, but if you leave them doing the same task for too long, then they'll take it upon themselves to head off the other way, teleport back to base or go and have a chat with their mates. Admittedly you get a flashing warning that they've wandered off, but when you've got four other diggers spread over a wide area, enemy miners and monsters to deal with, the last thing you need is a vital worker taking an impromptu fag break.

I can see that the idea's to create a game with more depth, but it just muddles the gameplay. Why don't the workers pick up the jewels automatically and why do you have to go through several screens before you can cash in your jewels?

Once you've gone to the trading screen, you often find that you can't, since there are about six types, but only three are being traded at any one time. Again, I suspect that this is supposed to 'enrich' your game, but it's just bloody annoying. Now all this is intended to point out the shortfalls of the game, not to slag it off entirely (Clever mining pun there, Mark. - Ed), so I'll finish off by picking it up off the floor, dusting its coat down and apologising to it a bit. Diggers is a fine game, and I've been playing it for hours on end, and if you like the look of it, it's unlikely that you're going to tire of it. It's pretty much a mining god sim, so you can play offensive or defensive tactics, chose to ignore the enemy or go all out to kill them. This flexibility is its main plus point, but the over-complicated control system is a major downer. I wouldn't go so far as to say it's worth buying a CD32 for, but if you've got one, then it's well worth having. MARK WINSTANLEY

UPPERS Great music, fantastic graphics and novel gameplay, and all on a new format, too. It's possibly the hugest playing area of all time, and with four different character types it seems entirely probable that you're never going to see all of the game, even if you play it a long time. Like till the end of forever, maybe.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Streamlining of many of Diggers' features would have resulted in a game that would be an absolute must for all CD32 owners, but as it stands, it's a fun, but quirky game. If you like strategy games and are into the idea of hour-long games, then you'll howl at me for not hailing this as a classic, but awkward interaction and peculiar pace stop this getting a higher score.

THE BOTTOM LINE It's not out at the moment, but there's going to be an A1200 version released soon, which will be missing all the flash music and stuff.

BURNING RUBBER

Price: £25.99 Release: Out now

uming Rubber, eh? Phwoar, sounds a bit like – no, sorry. I never could quite carry off that schoolboy innuendo stuff properly, even when I was a schoolboy. 'Bum', 'pants', 'poo', 'wee', even 'willy', they never raised much of a chuckle for me. Maybe I've just got no sense of humour. Yeah, that's probably it. It'd certainly explain a few things about International Rugby Challenge, at least. But anyway.

Burning Rubber, née Hot Hatches, is Ocean's moderately long-awaited rallying sim. You drive one of a wide range of family hatchback-type cars (hence the original, even double entendrier, title) like the Fiesta (yes, yes),

Renault 5, Golf and Astra through all your favourite European countries, then hop across the 'pond' to drive some fine American

'automobiles' through the USA in similar fashion. It's not your everyday kind of foot-down racer, though – before each stage, you're presented with a map of the country you're about to traverse (well, not all of it, obviously – just the particular microcosm of nationality that the race's unseen organisers have chosen to represent it), on which you can select your own route from a wide range of criss-crossing highways.

As you then drive the track, big red arrows pop up to show you which way you ought to be going at the numerous junctions and crossroads that crop up as you go along. If you go a different way to the one you chose on the map screen, or miss one of your turnings (easily done, for reasons I'll go into in a minute), you can still complete the course perfectly well, but you'll have to work out the turns for yourself until you get back on the right route. This is actually really good fun there's a real glow of pride to be gained from accidentally shooting past a junction, then navigating yourself round an unmarked road network and eventually getting yourself back on course and still managing to beat your opponents to the finishing line. One of the best things about Burning Rubber is that the rules apply to the computer opponents in the race too – they all choose their own routes, and you'll regularly see them splitting up at junctions, or coming down the road at you when you've chosen diametrically opposite paths to the finish. Also, because this is supposed to be a proper illegal road race, the computer drivers all stick to the left-hand side of the road (or the right when you move to Europe - another nice touch), moving across the white line only to overtake. This gives you a big advantage in that you can just drive up the wrong side all the time and overtake really easily, but you do risk smashing head-on into oncoming traffic, which brings me to my first big complaint when you do this, you sustain a heavy amount of damage, but otherwise nothing very much happens, which is silly. Coming to a complete stop seems to me to be the very least you could hope for in this situation, and being able to continue on your merry way seemingly > unscathed is daft. And since I've started, I might as well get all the other gripes out of the way. It's really annoying to get thrown in jail by the police and lose a credit for going past a panda car at 71mph there ought to be some kind of scale here, whereby if you stop and say "It's a fair cop, guv" when the sirens go, you just get fined some of your cash, but running away at high speed and ramming the police car when it pulls over in front of you gets you banged in the slammer with Mr Big. It's extraaggravating when someone else shoots past you doing 30mph more than you during the chase, but it's still you who gets nicked. If you ask me, Crazy Cars 3 handled things a great deal better in this department.

The amount of slowing-down you have to do for junctions is a bit ridiculous too (anything over 10mph and you'll either overshoot and miss completely, or smash your car to bits on the side of the road as you go round), as is the tiny amount of visual warning you get of one coming up (especially in the nighttime tracks, where you don't changing-scenery motif that lets you know when one's imminent, but it's not really enough to give you a fair chance, and it takes the game's realism (and this IS a very realistic driving game, in as much as you could reasonably expect) just one stage too far. And finally, just what's going on with the perspective? Going by the screen, you appear to be both inside your car looking at the dashboard and slightly behind it looking at the back wheels, which becomes all the more baffling when you notice that the car you're looking at doesn't appear to have a driver at all. Similarly, most of the other cars in the race appear to be twice the size of yours when you get up close.

Graphics in general are Burning Rubber's weakest feature - it's very jerky going round bends, which plays havoc with your eyes after a while, and the rainy and night-time courses just look like someone's dripping blue paint down the screen and blowing a load of soot onto it respectively. But the thing is, for all its faults, I really enjoyed it. In forcing you to drive realistically sometimes (when there's a radar trap coming up, or when you really have to avoid damage to get to the end intact, say), it's got a feel unlike any other computer racing game I've played, and that's something of a breath of fresh air as far as I'm concerned. I wish I had more space, because there's lots more I'd like to say, but I'm going to have to tell you that you could do a lot worse than this and leave it at that. Give this one a chance. STUART CAMPBELL

UPPERS It successfully captures the lonely rallydriving atmosphere, without ever just feeling empty like Jaguar XJ220 or F17 Challenge. Meeting an opposing driver coming in the other direction along the road because he's taken a different route to you is really quite exciting. No, it is. The fab and kicking intro by the Utah Saints, no less, is a bit corking too.

(pretty ropey graphics generally, in fact), and going round corners and junctions is a complete pain in the butt. The police are completely annoying, too - the system in Crazy Cars 3 was far better than this one-mistake-andyou're-completely-knackered kind of affair. Oh, and up for accelerate aarrgghh! (But at least you don't slow down when you let go.)

THE BOTTOM LINE

As long as you don't expect it to be a Lotus-type all-out arcade racer, Burning Rubber isn't half bad. It's technically naff in most ways, but I've got a soft spot for it I can't quite shake off. It's a different kind of driving game, and that's no bad thing.

THE BOTTOM LINE Nothing different as far as my perceptive O skills could tell. Not even the scrolling, for a change.

Game: Overkill Publisher: Digisoft Authors: Vision Software Price: £25.99 Release: Out now (import)

oh, I'm so frustrated. I've been going out of my head for the last three days trying to remember the name of the coin-op that this game reminds me of, and I just can't get it. It was out about a year or so ago (possibly more like two), it was by Midway (I think), and it was a ridiculously frenetic updating of Defender, in much the same way that Smash TV gave the '90s reworking treatment to Robotron. Overkill has clearly been heavily inspired by it, but I can't remember enough about the coinop to say for sure whether Overkill's a straight clone of it or just a bit similar, and it's driving me mental. It's like when you have a really weird dream, and then you wake up and get distracted for the briefest moment, and then you can't for the life of you recall what you'd been dreaming about just 20 seconds earlier, y'know? No, you probably don't, do you? It's probably just me. But whether you identify with that particular situation or not, there's no escaping one thing, and that's that Overkill is a new game from Vision Software, the people who brought you the storming Defender (on our issue 26 coverdisk) and Skidmarks (on this very issue's coverdisk). Unlike those two, though, Overkill isn't written with Bliz Basic 2, but is in fact 100% AGA machinecode, and for the A1200 only to boot. And since we've already established that I can't provide you with a precise reference point in the form of a coin-op comparison, I'd better tell you what it's about.

IT'S DEFENDER, ISN'T IT?

Well, it's Defender, basically. Yeah, sure, there are a few tweaks and extras, but the gameplay is all but identical. Some nasty aliens are trying to steal crystals which litter the ground of various planets, in order to transform themselves into harder aliens. You have to blast the aliens,

GAME REVIEWS

obviously, but you also have to help a little army of humanoids who walk around on the ground trying to blow up the crystals before the aliens can get their slimy tentacles on them. When one manages to get a crystal, you have to pick him up off the ground to re-arm him with another anti-crystal mine, then drop him back off on the planet for another go. In a further dramatic plot twist, though – oh. There don't appear to be any more dramatic plot twists. That's it. Blow baddies away, pick up and drop off little humon pick up and drop off little humanoid geezers, and nothing else. Fair enough.

Overkill might be simple, but it's far from easy. After the first couple of levels (there are 17 planets to clear, and it's fearsomely hard by about number seven) the near-harmless (ish) airborne aliens you start off against are joined by enormous pseudo-boss characters, fastmoving and difficult-to-hit wormlike things, and utterly horrible ground tanks which fire totally evil missiles at you. To be honest, it makes very little difference whether you let the aliens grab the crystals or not - unlike Defender, there's no cataclysmic planetexploding disaster unleashed on you if you allow all of them to be nicked, and the mutant aliens created by one escaping with a crystal aren't really significantly meaner than the ordinary ones - but the major points rewards you get for destroying them and collecting the humanoids are your only real chance of getting anywhere, since you get an extra life and shield-life extension every 25,000 points, so you're constantly being tempted to fly into horrifically dangerous places in order to grab your little troopers.

Overkill's loaded with power-ups, but they've all got a limited life and things never get unbalanced (well, not in your favour, at least), so the game's a constantly challenging battle against what rapidly become completely overwhelming odds. You do, though, in the tradition of all great games, find yourself getting further into it the more you play it, so it's never either frustratingly hard or tediously easy (or even a little bit easy). The difficulty curve, in fact, is probably Overkill's greatest strength, which with only 17 planets to conquer is probably just as well.

Aesthetically, you might not be especially impressed with the screenshots on these pages, but that's only because you can't see them moving. The parallax scrolling is lovely, movement is supersmooth, aliens explode in an extremely gratifying over-ripe watermelon kind of a way, and even when there's a completely silly number of sprites all hurtling around, there's never the

scrolling is slightest hint of slowdown or breakup. Then again, it IS running on an E

A1200, so what else would you expect? Sound isn't great (perfectly decent blasting and exploding sounds but not enough of them, and pretty ropey speech synthesis) but it's good enough, and the important things like control response and graphical clarity are just peachy.

The only thing which really disturbs me about Overkill is the price. It's all very well saying a great game is a great game whatever it costs (which is true, after all), but this really isn't very far advanced from something like Anarchy (which you can get on Psygnosis' budget label Sizzlers for less then a tenner), or even from Defender itself, which, of course, is free. Whether you think extra 16 (or 26) quid is too much to pay for some flashy graphics and nice parallax scrolling or not is entirely up to you, though, and I can't see anyone who buys this feeling too ripped off at the end of the day. Just don't expect anything more than a great oldfashioned arcade blast, and you certainly won't be disappointed. STUART CAMPBELL curve, frantic action, incredibly busy but always clear graphics, and generally top shoot-'em-up thrills aplenty.

Maybe they're dangerously violent patients released on some sort of alien 'care in the community' programme.

UPPERS Great difficulty

DOWNERS The sound seems like a bit of an afterthought, (although what there is is perfectly fine), and gameplay depth is conspicuous by its absence.

THE BOTTOM LINE Although it may well

A1200 be a bit thin for a fullprice release in this day and age, Overkill is still a damn groovy blast in classic Defender style, and you'll never find me complaining about one of those.

THE BOTTOM LINE

We don't know if there's going to be an A500/600 version. Although with graphics like these, we suspect not.

hink about your all-time favourite movies. "What was it that made them so good?" I find myself asking in a rhetorically erudite type of fashion. Could it have been the identification factor - you related to the characters, their environment or their situation? Perhaps it was a particularly ingenious plot? It may even have been a pyrotechnical synaptic overdrive of intensely-furious, visually-extravagant special effects that stroked your trodes. (What? - Ed) All of these things are certainly contributory factors, but not enough. No, the answer I was looking for was 'atmosphere'.

Without atmosphere, how can you possibly hope to relate to a confusion of images flashing past your eyes at 25 frames a second?

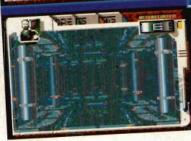

> Atmosphere is conducive to that synaesthetic fusion of sensation, rationality and disbelief resulting in total immersion of self. (Don't worry, we don't understand any of this either. But it sounds good. -Ed) Your favourite movies are probably the ones with atmospheres that made you feel you were there, as participant or observer. One case in point is Alien or Blade Runner. (That's two cases in point. - Ed) In both cases it's pathos-inducing atmosphere that makes them so wonderful. Both have a restrictedluminance palette (They're not very bright. - Ed), and both are very claustrophobic, too. Alien in particular has you sitting on the edge of your seat, dripping cold sweat and totally unsure of when the next big fright is coming. So it is with Hired Guns.

The plot (yes, it is worth mentioning) bears more than a passing resemblance to Aliens. This time, though, the habitable planet is deliberately producing dangerous bio-engineered organisms. Your job, as part of a mercenary crew of four, is to reconnoitre (Look at. - Ed) various locations and render them safe. Four of these locations are particularly important in that they contain fusion power core rings which enable you to blow up the aliens' distribution point.

From the very beginning you know you're in for a rare treat. The opening music spins a web of tense anticipation. Already you feel as if you're trapped like a fly in the ointment. The character feet at a time with every click of the mouse or push of the joystick. The control interface is useful and doesn't get in the way of the action, which there's plenty of. Of particular note is the game's facility to let up to four players play all at the same time, each controlling their own character. You could even try to kill each other if you wanted to. There's even an option to play with Sega joypads if you have access to them - you've got to modify them with a soldering iron (!) so that the Amiga will read all three fire buttons, but believe me, having three fire buttons can make a big difference to the speed of the mundane things like picking up equipment you've found on the way.

But back to that all-important atmosphere. Just as in Aliens we've got a restricted palette resulting in a broody, foreboding (Scary. - Ed) sense of imminent danger. The various buildings and corridors feel genuinely claustrophobic. In true Psygnosis style, the surroundings are visually beautiful in an unsettling, macabre H R Giger-type way.

The beauty of the environment, of course, would not be enough on its own very high quality sampled sounds. I defy of the shotgun and its consequent reloading click when you hit the right mouse button, or the constant thrum of electrical power as you walk through troubled corridors.

GOING OFF HALF-COCKED

Being new to the office, I've been getting lots of advice on how to make my reviews sound different from all the others. So, occasionally, one of my traits is going to be a discussion of a game's Gestalt factor. (Uh-oh. - Ed)

According to this very important branch of psychology, our brains form mental pictures, opinions etc from the sum of the parts that make up a whole. Theoretically, the whole should be greater than the sum of the parts. So what's this got to do with Hired Guns? Loads actually.

Jack yourself into the game with a pair of headphones (I had to, Stuart was playing his 'special' music extra loudly). Turn down all the lights until you're sitting in absolute darkness. Start exploring and terminating aliens with extreme prejudice. Before you know it, you're no longer sitting in front of an Amiga, you're right there in dangerousville with your chosen party.

Happily for old man Gestalt, Psygnosis have indeed created a whole greater than the sum of the parts with Hired Guns; consensual ('Reacting according to stimulation of another part'. according to the dictionary. - Ed) graphics, top-notch sound-effects, intuitive control system and well-thought-out party parts.

On the subject of parts, I'll leave you with a quick summary of particularly impressive details that help create the aforementioned synergetic experience.

All of your mapping is carried out by a DTS (Digital Terrain Scanner). Don't lose it. Psionics freaks are well catered for with a veritable cornucopia (A lot. -Ed) of psionic devices. There's enhanced sound on two meg Chip RAM machines (410K's worth, apparently). Plus super trooper weapons systems:

launchers, proximity mines, sentry guns that shoot anything within ten feet, shotguns, fluorine blasters (They immobilise aliens by making all their teeth fall-out, I think. - Ed) and so on. And finally finally, there's enough weapons systems here to bring peace through superior firepower to any spatial outback. Whoopee for that, eh?

STEVE McGILL

Guns, guns, guns and more guns. There's enough hardware in this game to keep Mark Winstanley happy for at least five minutes on a Bank Koliday weekend in Brighton.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Hired Guns is an interactive consensual (Look, stop that or there'll be trouble. - Ed) experience of co-operation and extreme violence. Miss it at your peril.

GEAR WORKS

Game: Gear Works Publisher: Hollyware Entertainment Authors: Stefano Lecchi Price: £19.99 Release: Late September

ne of the fortunate aspects about working on a magazine like AMIGA POWER is that you get the chance to see lots and lots of games. Not just Amiga games, but Sega, Nintendo and PC games as well. In general, the majority of games all share one thing in common - they don't cut the mustard. For each genre, there is an iconic star floating like the sun in a miasma of dark unfriendly shadows, eg Formula One Grand Prix in the racing car simulation stakes or Desert Strike in the shoot-'em-up department.

Occasionally, a real novelty brainjack of a game turns up which defines its own genre. In this case, Tetris immediately springs to mind. Despite numerous attempts, Tetris has still never been bettered. Ingenuity inspires imitation. Not necessarily plain old copies, but real live games in their own right. One of the better Tetris derivatives was Klax. Fast, furious and better looking, it never quite caught on with the net of Tetris devotees, despite several conversions.

So what's all this got to do with Gear Works, Hollyware Entertainments' offering from John-Major-land in Huntingdon? Not a great deal in a direct manner. It's an innovative puzzle game based on varying up to each other in various different fashions. In this instance, there are three separate sizes of gear. "Strike me down in a vat of sour milk if that isn't a large number," I say, in a totally incredulous kind of manner.

The aim of the game is to set up a chain of synchronised freemoving gears to link up all of the red cogs positioned on the screen at the beginning of each section. All this gear-turning needs an engine to drive it. Gears cause friction and inevitably the engine heats up. If the engine gets too hot, you lose a life and have to start again. Okay, the engine is just a cheap-shot attempt at pretending that you aren't under a time limit. But you are, and it is. A timer, that is. Each screen consists of varying numbers and patterns of pegs. You hang your gears on the pegs which diminish in number as you progress and consequently forces the type of gear that can be placed in certain positions. Sounds joystick-tremblingly good eh? Well there's more than that to get to grips with.

As if the engine overheating and peg limitation weren't enough, there are two cutesy little monsters who do less than their slacking best to hamper your progress. They're known as poffins (probably due to legal difficulties with

So far, so indifferent. Is Gear Works up to scratch in today's fast-living overlystimulated, market-driven society? Well, put simply, it could have been. Look at the commodities. Albeit living breathing money-spending commodities. But we aren't totally stupid. If you want to sell something to us that isn't a body-functioning essential, you've got to know who your target audience is. To find this info out, you've got to engage in a practice known as market research. (Hello. We apologise for this interruption to your review. Normal service will be resumed as soon as we get Steve to tell us what the sodding heck he's wittering on about. – Ed) I'll give you an example of how the research part operates. The look of Gear Works reminded me of an early 1980s Commodore 64 game. This induced confusion in me. Could I be living in the wrong decade? To double-check on the date I asked Stuart, Mark, Linda and Dave. They all said it was 1993 (except Linda, who hilariously thought it was 1994).

Ah, the Có4. The earth wire working its way into the tape deck. Those were the days.

> Not content with their answers, though I suspected they were correct, I further checked with the office calendar. The calendar certainly backed up their claims. I still wasn't content. I phoned BT's speaking clock, which confirmed my earlier suspicions – ie it is indeed 1993. Not to mention 12.56 precisely.

Gear Works, though, looks like, sounds like and plays like an oldfashioned C64 game. Even the name 'Gear Works' is lacking in lustre. It sounds like a fashion statement trapped in a bizarre 1960s and/or 1970s time warp.

The basic idea is sound. The implementation is awful. In Tetris, simple as it is, there are seven different shapes which can be put together in an unlimited number of permutations. In Gear Works, there are three shape sizes which are further limited placement-wise by the positioning of the pegs. Once your brain adjusts to the peg patterning, you can work out well in advance what cogs should be positioned where. I couldn't be bothered to work out the possible mathematical combinations but Gear Works suffers from an acute inversely proportional index of possibilities. Which is all rather sad really. Gear Works has great potential. The planning and implementation lets it down badly.

With all that said and done, I've got to confess that I actually enjoyed playing Gear Works in a village idiot kind of a way. It's got the same kind of hook as a garden maze or a Sun crossword. It's not that you're going to get lost, be particularly challenged or not manage to finish the thing. You'll do that okay. It's more a case of 'How long is it going to take this time?' In fact, only if you're weapons-grade stupid or extremely young is Gear Works going to tax the grey matter lying between your ears.

You've reached the end, so you mish expect a graphical or musical reward sequence. But no, you get a truit machine. None close

Nope, despite admiring the attempt, I have to say that Gear Works has all the feel of a back-to-the-'80s marketing ploy ignore what's happening in the real games-playing world, don't pay attention to details like entertainment and variety and charge way over the score for what you're offering. I mean, £20 for a game that offers a fruit machine bonus round! Fruit machine sims of infinitely more sophistication were released on red, orange and yellow Mastertronic labels for £1.99 in 1987, and now lurk all over the PD libraries. Sorry Hollyware. Nice idea, shame about the game. STEVE McGILL potential, fresh idea in an ideologically bereft market. Manages to keep you mildly addicted despite the overall lack of challenge. Would be good for young children if released on budget.

DOWNERS The limited number of gear sizes severely impedes the challenge that the game may otherwise have offered. Shame.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Vastly overpriced for what's on offer. If released on budget around the £6.99 mark it might have picked up another 10%, but it wasn't, so it doesn't.

THE BOTTOM LINE

A1200 No difference in game play, number of colours, running speed or anything worth mentioning. In fact, Gear Works is a bit of an insult to this machine. 000

DOGFIGHT

Tally-ho! Time bandits at 3 o'clock! 3 o'clock, 28th July, 1914, that is. Or any time up to the present day.

Game: Dogfight Publisher: MicroProse Authors: In house Price: £34.99 Release: Late September

ime travel's a funny old thing, isn't it? Before the 332 bus to Bristol so cruelly crushed the life out of Tim Tucker, I found out that we both shared a childhood experience. Being a musical type, the young Tucker used to daydream of going back in time to the early '60s and claiming credit for all pop innovations. He figured that since he knew all the lyrics to the Beatles songs and when they were released, he could set himself up as Timmy T and the Bootles and beat them to stardom by a few months. Then he could break the band up and form the Rolling Pebbles, then become Zoggy Stardust and so on, marching down the years as pop's greatest supremo.

I also had a similar dream as a child, but it wasn't quite as idealised as Tim's. I used to dream of going through time with a case of Kalashnikov rifles and boxes of ammo doling them out to various civilisations to see how history would be altered. Cortez would have had a much harder time slaughtering the Incas if they'd been lurking round the jungle with AK47s, and I'd imagine that John Wayne movies would have been vastly different if the Apache had laid down interlocking fields of suppressing fire instead of riding around on their horses and whooping a lot.

Well anyway, whereas Tim's dreams of rock and pop domination now exist only in his zombie mind, it transpires that my adolescent schoolboy dream is one that's shared by other people, as there was a crap film called The Final Countdown, the main plot of which involved a modern aircraft carrier getting zapped back to 1941 to intercept the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbour. Unfortunately, the scriptwriters wimped out of a fantastic dogfight finale by having all the planes called back to the carrier at the last minute, so we never got to see how a load of F15s would have fared against waves of slow, poorly armed Zeros.

This sort of trans-temporal conflict is exactly what Dogfight's all about, as it covers 80 years of aerial warfare from WW1 to modern day Syria, and allows you to pick and mix planes of any era to see just how mismatched they are. Dogfight's really a collection of three quite separate games, so I'll cover them one at a time.

Firstly there's the duel mode, where you pick one of two planes from the same era and go all out against the computer in mano-a-mano machismo until there's only one plane left. Each pair are evenly matched, with similar performance, so it's up to your skills as a pilot as to who wins. The thing is, the computer opponent isn't one of these drones that just follows you around loosing off occasional heatseekers, nor does it cheat by changing its position when it's out of your view. The intelligence that the computer show is frightening, and it's great to set the screen on a reverse tactical view, hurl your plane about and just watch your enemy respond to your random movements. Both planes get damaged in increments, and once they start to pour smoke, they're much easier to spot from a distance, and also look brilliant as the smoke works like the trails left by planes at air shows. It's a shame that all the planes don't trail smoke all the time under the guise of vapour trails or something, as they look just great.

The second part of the game is the missions section, and this is the bit that's standard flight sim stuff. Although there are only six missions (one for each time period) you effectively get twelve, as you can play either side. You choose to either attack or defend several locations, and although you only control one plane, you have to place up to thirty additional planes on various patrol routes. On the WW2 mission, for instance, you take off in a Spitfire from an airfield in the south of England, and have to intercept some Ju88's before they bomb various radar stations and airfields.

While your other units go off and fight their own little battles, you're free to lock onto incoming units and shoot them up, so you either circle round an airfield, or head off over the channel to pounce on them in formation. Although this section suffers from the usual flight sim problem of very little happening for ages, most of these lags can be cut out by accelerating time, and there aren't any tiresome waypoints or navigation to faff around with, as you can simply choose a target and then select an automatic intercept mode.

Finally, there's the What If? section, which is undeniably the best bit of the game. You choose any of the twelve planes from the game (two from each time period) and then can pick up to five enemies to dogfight against, so if you're a bit crap like me, you can go for five WW1 triplanes against my Spitfire, or if you're feeling hard, you can pit a 1950s Sabre against a couple of Harriers and a few Phantoms. The idea's that you can see how much better missiles are than cannons, how much better angled thrust is than propeller power and so on, but after a few goes several points become apparent.

For a start, vintage planes have many advantages over jets because of their tight turning circles, and many of them can't be locked onto by heat seeking missiles, and jets fly so fast that you tend to overshoot the older planes at colossal speeds. After a bit, I found the older planes to be the best fun, since you've only got cannons rather than all those flashy missiles, flares, and things. Maybe this is just me though, since my fave sim is Knights Of The Sky, so perhaps other people will go for the fast-moving, hightech stuff, and the great thing about this is that the option's there for trying both. I'm still not convinced that a Spitfire would be quite as good against a Mirage, or a Fokker Triplane as fearsome against a MiG 21F, as the game suggests, so maybe a bit more difference in handling and performance would have been a Good Thing.

To sum up, Dogfight's main appeal is the What If? section, and the other bits are there to increase the game life, which is no bad thing. The glare effect from the sun, the smoke trails from damaged planes and missiles are brilliant touches, and the modelling of the planes is wonderful. It does suffer from typical flight sim problems, such as distinguishing distant planes from your own cannon fire (as they're all represented by dots) and the Al of the enemy is so good that I found it virtually impossible to get an enemy on the screen for more than a few seconds when it would have been nice to creep up on a bomber and blast it from close range. It's a game, not a flight sim, but so what? It's good fun, but why isn't there a two-player link-up option, when the game's just gagging for it? You slipped up there, guys. MARK WINSTANLEY

UPPERS Brilliantly modelled planes and all the fun of flight sims without all that dull navigation stuff. The What If? section's the real meat of the game, allowing frantic dogfight action, and I just lurrrve those smoke trails from damaged planes. They're fab.

DOWNERS The planes change from dots to closeup too quickly for you to appreciate the graphics properly, and there isn't enough difference in handling between the WW1 and modern planes.

THE BOTTOM LINE

It's good to see that MicroProse are building games onto their flight sim experience instead of just producing a stream of detailed simulations. Dogfight's an aeroplane shoot-'emup, and while you can pick it up and start blasting away, there's enough sim in it to allow you to perfect your flying style and combat techniques.

THE BOTTOM LINE It runs just that little bit faster, but only because we told the programmers that we needed some differences to fill out this box. "I found that the older planes are the best fun"

You have to switch to another screen to see the instrument panel, but it's pretty, isn't it?

BETTER YOU LOOK. THE MORE YOU SEE

As usual, you can see the action from loads of views...

Serverse Trate-View From Met08

Step 1 to a VR World: STAR WARS

(Atari, 1982)

Whatever the field, the Star Wars movie and its spinoffs did it first. And VR is no exception, thanks to the legendary Star Wars coin-op. Let's run through a check list. Polygons? Yup. Not filled ones, perhaps, but the best technology could offer at the time. Sampled sound? "Red Five! I'm going in!" etc. Sit-in cabinet? There's none comfier. Simple, repetitive gameplay? (Er, do Step 2. – Ed)

INDIANAPOLIS 500

Step 2 to a VR World: INDIANAPOLIS 500 (Electronic Arts, 1990)

Race round and round and round (and round) the world's dullest racing circuit at tremendous speed, trying to avoid crashing (hem hem) with the graphic destruction that results. Not generally regarded as a virtual reality game when it first appeared, but the term hadn't yet been dreamt up (Shurely 'defined'? – Ed). Looking back, though, it's one of the best. Just look at all those polygons.

Step 3 to a VR World: CYBERCON 3 (US Gold, 1991)

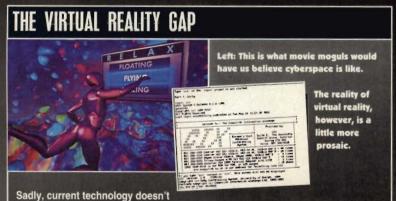

Although inexplicably omitted last time, Cybercon 3 is actually the ideal link between AP28's cyberpunk feature and this VR guide, featuring as it does the word 'Cyber', a giant computer trying to destroy its creators, and lots of polygons. The closest you'll get to real virtual reality on your Amiga. (Although you could try putting an upturned foot-spa on your head while you're playing it.)

After AP28's cyberpunk guide, you're probably asking "What's virtual reality,

"I'm worried," writes Hugh Dromgoole of Warminster. "My friends seem oddly distant, and I'm having trouble joining in with their conversations. What is this 'virtual reality' they speak of?" The AMIGA POWER dictionary can offer no single definition. Virtual, it attests, means "being something practically or in effect, although not in actual fact or name". And reality? "The quality or fact of being real". The AMIGA POWER dictionary has found a new home – the bottom of the AMIGA POWER bin. Its glib observations will have no place when VIRTUAL REALITY IS THE ONLY REALITY. o – virtual reality, eh? Everyone seems to be talking about it. And the only games worth playing, it seems, are ones that start with 'Virtual' or 'Virtua'. But exactly what is it that separates an ordinary shoot-'em-up from a virtual shoot-'em-up? Or a traditional text adventure from a virtual text adventure? And is virtual sex really the healthy way forward, or merely a convenient way of fleshing out the pages of inconsequential 'style' magazines?

Well, as its name suggests, virtual reality tries to simulate real life as closely as technology will allow, placing you in an artificial world and trying to convince you that it's not artificial at all. It's 'virtually reality', if you will. And, if VR's allow the complete immersion in a believable virtual world that's necessary for true VR success. The grab on the left shows the current state of the art in simulation, as The Lawnmower Man brings you the virtual experience of swimming through, er, a large tunnel full of pink and green triangles. When was the last time you went for a swim through a tunnel of pink and green triangles? Exactly. Without the millions of pounds of movie-type technology available to the producers of The Lawnmower Man, though, 'jacking in to the matrix' in the comfort and privacy of your own home actually offers an experience more akin to the image on the right. Can anyone tell me what's wrong with this picture?

YES, YES, BUT WHAT'S VIRTUAL REALITY ACTUALLY LIKE?

Frighteningly, Virtuality are seen here launching a full and complete world of their own.

Step 4 to a VR World: EXPENSIVE COIN-OPS (W Industries, Sega etc, 1993)

Here we're talking about things like Virtua Racing (which is spot on name-wise) and that slightly crap one that looks really good and then you sit down and put the thing on your head and it turns out to be a slightly wobbly slow-updating flight sim. These represent the current state of the art in VR (ie, they cost the most to have a go on).

THE HOLODECK

Step 5 to a VR World: THE HOLODECK (Star Trek: The Next Generation, 2364)

The briefest of commands creates the environment/ adversary/partner of your dreams. True, the holodeck has an nasty habit of going out of control and plunging the whole ship into danger. But luckily it only does it in weeks when Troi isn't having one of her funny turns, Riker's keeping his hands to himself, and life would otherwise have been rather dull.

BRAIN IMPLANTS

Step 6 to a VR World: BRAIN IMPLANTS

(The NHS, circa 2450) While the holodeck does away with VR's cumbersome peripheral trappings, there's still quite a bit of legwork involved, particularly in journeying back and forth from it. Far easier would be to directly stimulate those parts of the brain which control sensory perception. Maybe you could extract the whole thing and put it in a jar with lots of wires coming out or something. Maybe you already have ...

then?" Jonathan Davies explains why you need never leave your house again.

going to succeed, it needs to interface with all five of the senses that would otherwise destroy the illusion ...

SENSATION SEEKING

Sight. The primary sense, and the most important one to get right. Thus, 'virtual space' is depicted in vividlycoloured squares and triangles which have a tendency to suddenly disappear if you get too close to them. And 3D? The squares and triangles usually suffice in themselves if resources are limited, but a 'VR headset' makes all the difference, using a separate screen for each eye to provide an approximation of stereo vision (if you squint a bit, and have a rest every 20 minutes or so to stave off the headaches). Oh, and the VR headset has movement sensors so that, if you manage to turn your head under the weight of the thing, the view will change accordingly. 2 Hearing. Headphones incorporated into the VR headset pump out the usual techno-rave stuff, so no change there. Oh, and there are usually lots of samples. From, er, the real world.

Smell. This sense has yet to be tackled by the virtual industry. Most VR innovations originate in the cinema, though, so it's likely that an advanced form of scratch 'n' sniff technology will be employed.

Taste. Er. Obviously we love technology and all that, 4 Taste. Er. Obviously we love technology and but we think we'll pass when it comes to virtual food.

Oops. This would appear to be a picture of real reality. Sorry. Horrible, isn't it?

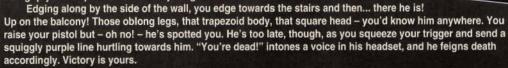

5 Touch. No problem. Pull on a pair of 'VR gloves' and they'll track your hand movements. Clench your fist and your VR fist will follow suit. Close your fingers around a virtual object and you'll pick it up. (Virtually, of course.) And, as you do so, feedback from the glove will make it feel as if you're touching something. Sort of.

That's the mysteries of virtual reality exploded, then. From now on you should have the confidence to illuminate your every utterance with references to 'the virtual datastream', 'virtual certainties', 'Virtual Brains and Lady Penelope' etc without for a moment losing your composure. Next month: Chaos theory. Or maybe dinosaurs.

Although the following description is at present fictitious, it could be reality sooner than you might imagine. Or, rather, virtual reality...

You fasten your VR boots and slide on your VR gloves. Then you pick up your VR laser pistol and, finally, place your VR headset over your head before lowering your VR visor and stepping through the door into the arena. Everything's dark, but your visor flickers into life.

There's a passage ahead of you – you can see its polygon representation in your headset. You reach out to touch one of the walls, and feedback from your VR glove tells you it's solid enough. You start to walk forward, and your VR boots send signals up to your VR headset telling it to alter the view as you move. The passage opens out into a large hall, with a balcony around the sides and a staircase leading up to it. There's no time to admire the scenery, however. Somewhere out there is your opponent. He's dressed up in just the same gear as you, and wants those points just as badly. You grip your VR pistol and narrow your gaze.

AND FINALLY ...

"Like, wow! What if life's actually some sort of gigantic virtual reality game that I'm playing without realising (You could call it Better Than Red Dwarf'. – Ironically-Obsessed-With-Obscure-Media-References Ed), and you lot are all just subroutines in some huge intergalactic super-computer?" This question will inevitably arise in any layman's discussion of VR and, now that you're an expert in the field, you should be ready with the answer: Life's real enough, all right. How can we be so sure?

- Otherwise, the frame update would be slower, and everything would get really jerky every time you saw a mirror.
- Everyone would have triangular feet and heads like shoe-boxes.
- There'd be no black people or white people. Instead, all would be equal - the same virulent shade of pink.
- There's no such thing as a virtual toilet.

this guy? Last year, Allan Brett became a celebrity overnight after he scooped the National Games Championships. Not only that though - as well as the glory, he also walked off with £10,000 IN HARD CASH.

Remember

Using outrageous skill, the 18-year-old from Hull managed to be the best on Sega, Nintendo and Amiga machines.

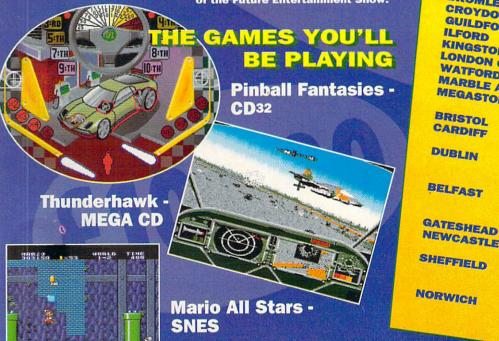

THIS YEAR THE GAMES CHAMP COULD BE YOU!

On this page you'll see the dates and venues for the first round eliminators. They're being held in Virgin Retail outlets in the major cities of Britain over the next few weeks.

All you have to do is turn up, and play. If you're good enough – and you'll have to be very good – you'll be into the next round. And after that... the finals at the Future Entertainment Show in London on 11 - 14 November.

The National Games Championship is organised by Future Publishing, producer of this, and many other great games magazines, and organiser of the Future Entertainment Show.

Games music, eh? Tim Tucker meets the guys behind the sounds that make you

For Shakespeare it was the food of love; for John Miles, it was his first love, (and it will be his last); it begins where language leaves off, and can cause tears of sorrow and whoops of joy. Yes, music is important alright. But how does it fit into the world of Amiga games, and is it absolutely essential or just a damned nuisance when you're waggling your joystick? I'm Tim Tucker, I've just interviewed three top Amiga tune-smiths, and you can be sure that I said thank-you for the music, for giving it to me.

JASON WHITELY

Being a rock-hard investigative journalist (and seeing as Electronic Arts invited me up to have a chat). I went up to Slough to see Jason Whitely, a man well qualified to talk about games and music. Why? Well, he's been responsible for some of EA's most kicking sounds, including the much-lauded Desert Strike soundtrack, possibly the best sound to grace an Amiga game yet. Jason has been given his own working guarters in the Electronic Arts stronghold, where he's constantly kept busy putting together tunes for the awardwinning company's ceaseless production line. So Jason, how did you get into this business? (Did you always want to be a video game musician? - Zag) "Well I had classical training on the piano for a start, and 'A' Level music, and I'd been playing music of my own for 12 years. Before I came here three years ago I was working freelance for a video company, synching audio to visuals for Ford car presentations. Then I sent some demos in to a few game companies, and after a while EA gave me a job.'

What was it that made you want to work with game music in the first place?

"For a start I was so into games. I used to always wonder how the hell they got the music to play with them, I was fascinated by it. My two main interests are music and games, and I just wanted to put the two together." So, what have you worked on since?

"On the Amiga: Road Rash, Desert Strike, John Madden's Football, Power Monger, Strike Fleet, Risky Woods and, coming soon, Space Hulk, which is something I'm really looking forward to. There's also the possibility of a Space Hulk dance single, which we're looking into at the moment."

An impressive track record (Clever wording, we know. - Ed), but no doubt it's not been without its complications. What are the biggest problems you face when putting together a track for a game?

"Memory restrictions are a nightmare. Like with Road Rash, when it was reviewed in AMIGA POWER, is it a guy called Stuart ... ?"

RICHARD JOSEPH

Softography: 3D Tennis, SEUCK. Barbarian 2. James Pond. Speedball 2. Gods. Magic Pockets, Mega lo Mania. Wizkid. Sensible Soccer. The Chaos Engine, Lure Of The Temptress, Robocod, the music for Putty and Myth. There are more. Right now he's putting the final touches to Millennium's Diggers for the CD32, and there's James Pond 3 and Sensi's Cannon Fodder for the Amiga.

Right, seriously now. This is Magic Pockets. Fab, eh?

8 I A 48 Anyone who's rocked to the sound of The Chaos Engine, or pulverised a few faces in Speedball 2 will be familiar with Richard Joseph's work. But how important does Richard consider his role in the gameplaying process? "I can play a game guite happily with the music off, just listening to the FX, as these give information about pickups etc. It all depends on the type of game, but for me the ultimate is a game where there is no silence, the music suits all parts of the action, the characters speak and the FX are totally realistic - like a film! How do you feel about the Amiga's sound capabilities? Are they up to what you want?

want to 'play it again'.

Er, you mean Stuart Campbell.

"Yeah, he kind of slagged it down. Obviously the public aren't particularly interested in the technical side of how the music's made, but with Road Rash, that was 8K of track. I didn't want to do it, because it's difficult to do anything good with that amount of memory, but the company said they wanted it as close to the original as possible, so we went for it and it came out sounding like the C64. My girlfriend was reading this review to me, and it said "the music is crap". I couldn't believe it, I wanted to ring him up and say "You try doing a track with 8K of memory." But on the other end of the scale, with Desert Strike we had unspeakable amounts of memory."

Desert Strike was possibly your finest moment yet. Why do you think it was so successful? \rightarrow

"I would like more channels. You really need around five channels for music and three for FX. Having said this, if the Amiga had come out with only one channel it still would have been revolutionary. Comparing it with other machines... well, I still can't believe the Soundblaster board is the PC industry standard – it sounds revolting, and the Mega Drive isn't much better. Why do they use those FM chips? It has to be the cost of the things, but let's be honest, folks... FM is CRAP. The SNES? Hmmm, it does have eight channels, but there's so much messing around, and a completely useless 64K of RAM for sound. Each world of The Chaos Engine uses 220K of sound data on the Amiga... you try doing a SNES version of that lot."

ALLISTER BRIMBLE

Softography: At least 100 games, but here are some of the better known – Alien Breed, Project-X, Assassin, Superfrog, Full Contact, Overdrive, The Lost Vikings, Star Trek 25th, Goal!, Championship Manager, Thunderbirds, Fantasy World Dizzy, Fast Food Dizzy, Dojo Dan, Miami Chase, Merlin's Maths, and Noddy 2.

"Music is important, especially the title tune which sets the scene for the rest of the game. For me though, sound effects have the highest priority, without which a game would be almost unplayable. Fourchannel sound effects, rather than in-game music, really worked well in the Team 17 games and as such added to the playability." The current debate about the video game industry killing pop music seems to neglect the fact that music is alive and well in games themselves. Do you think there's any chance of game music feeding back to the music biz, and perhaps even reviving it? "In terms of the Amiga, many of the best musicians have stopped writing for the Amiga and moved over to the consoles. However, quite a few musicians, such as Chris Huelsbeck, Bjorn Lynne and myself have created audio CDs which could perhaps feed ideas back to the musical mainstream."

And if you're interested in hearing any of Allister's music (aside from in games of course), check out his 'Sounds Digital' CD, which consists of 11 songs written using his synthesiser setup and includes remixes of Project-X and Assassin. It costs £11.75, in either cheques or postal orders payable to ALLISTER BRIMBLE, from the following address:

GAMES MUSIC

"Because of the massive amount of memory I had to play around with, I could concentrate on the finer details. For example, the rotor blades effect wasn't just a straight sample. The angles of the helicopter were worked out so that if it banked twenty feet to the left, the wind increases and it produces a more bassy effect on the left-hand side. All that kind of architecture of the sound really contributed to making Desert Strike work really well, and that's why it got such good reviews."

How do you come up with the music for a game? Is it something you're given as a brief, or are you left to your own devices?

"A lot of game designers don't have a clue what they want, and quite often they just say, 'Oh, I dunno, do whatever you want', whereas for other games, say a space game, they'll say 'We want something like Star Wars', and I go away and do that. With Desert Strike they wanted military music, and I said 'That's boring, everyone does that, why don't we try and do something a bit different?' Like, there's that program about a futuristic helicopter, Airwolf, and it was upstate and modern, sort of Miami-Vice-style music. That's what I wanted for Desert Strike, and everyone said 'It's not gonna work, you're gonna fall down on this one,' but I went ahead and did it and to their surprise they loved it. So now they say, 'J - you know the score'.'

So what do you think is the future for game music? "The way I see it, the way forward is with CD, not only for the sound capabilities, but also for the sheer mass of storage. We're in the process of putting together 100 grand's worth of studio here, gearing up for the CD market and 3DO. It'll be amazing, because we can start incorporating vocals and stuff. But despite all that, there'll always be a place for programmed music for the in-game stuff, because you can't play CD music at the same time as the game. That'll be mainly for intro sequences, and between-game sections.'

With Jason's already superlative track record, we can only expect great things from EA's sound department in the future. Also, keep an eye out for Jason in the charts, under his dance music pseudonym, Kool J Nice. And don't be so hasty to turn down the game music in future - you could be missing out on some genuinely rocking tunes.

Dum-dum dee dum-dum, dum-dum-dum dee dumdum... Oops, that's the Channel 4 TV show theme, sorry.

Apidya

There's about five album's worth of various kinds of music in this great shoot-'em-up's soundtrack (and you can play em all from the options screen too), but the 'Techno Party' tunes in particular are awesome hardcore dancefloor rave monsters which'd pack your local groove shop out in seconds.

JNES

Gem'X Dreamy Oriental tunes complement this dreamy Oriental puzzler well, dreamily. The FX are superb too, though, and Kiki's speech rounds off what's probably the allround best soundtrack in Amiga gaming history.

The Chaos Engine Not only is this a rock hard techno influenced rave-fest, but it's contextsensitive - when danger's just around the corner, the music becomes more sinister. Curiously, the music in the game is actually far better than that on the 12-inch single. Spot on.

Xenon 2 The theme from this veteran shootem-up was called Megablast, but the subtitle (Hip Hop On Precinct 13) is what gives it away - this throbbingly monstrous remix of one of the all-time great movie soundtracks is by far the best thing about loading the game.

Pinball Fantasies The almost New Age elegance of the intro theme is wondrous, and highly original for a video game. All the tables have thoroughly appropriate themes too, with special mention for the creaking doors on Stones and Bones, and the Partyland duck's quacks.

Agony

Unfortunately, this blaster (an early effort from Psygnosis) features some of the most gut-wrenchingly unpleasant in-game music known to man, but the exquisite piano piece accompanying the main title screen is heartbreakingly beautiful. Richard Clayderman, eat your fingers off (or someone else's).

Gods

Nation 12's finest moment, with the gorgeous 'Into The Wonderful' intro all the sweeter 'cos you don't actually get to hear it after you start the game. Responsible for massive amounts of non-playing here at AP.

Desert Strike Featuring Jason Whitely's excellent soundtrack and perfect sound effects, with thoroughly convincing militaristic sounds and frighteningly real helicopter effects. One of the very best audio experiences to grace a game. "J knows the score," indeed.

Oops Up Essentially just a 12" remix of the Snap tune of the same name, except that it does away with most of those unpleasantly strident vocals from Mr 'Turbo B' and it goes on for as long as you can survive in the game. More of a 144" remix, then, in fact.

You paint. You draw. And here's just a taste of what you've managed so far.

indsight, that's a good word isn't it? It's also something that it would appear we're not particularly blessed with here at AP, since although we've done fab things such as bring you exclusive predictions of the CD32, we really can't predict those little things in life. Like this 'In The Style Of' business. Who could have predicted the torrential influx of disks that would have followed from what was essentially a spacefiller on the news pages a few months ago? Not us, that's for sure, and certainly not the man from the post room whose ruptured hernia (from bringing them all up to our office) is a constant source of embarrassment to the entire AP staff.

Okay, let's get one thing straight, this IS NOT going to be a regular feature. We're not starting a gallery of reader art, just showing you an exclusive preview of some of the stuff we've received so far, perhaps to act as encouragement or inspiration for those of you who haven't got round to it yet. (We'll be judging the best in our news pages over the next few issues.) Anyway, here's a selection of the good, bad, ugly, and, in many cases, just plain misguided entries that have been sent in over the last few months.

Oh yes, it's that old 'dress something up like a Mega City Judge' idea, and we've had a good few of them sent in, I can tell you. In future, could you make sure that all your Judge Lemmings, Judge Sonics and Judge Zools are posted to 2000AD, not us, as they've been doing this sort of thing for over 15 years now and so are used to them. Anyway, Daniel Hammonds from Wolverhampton drew the best one, so here it is.

C'non,Sly! Cut the rope!

Please? CUT THE ROPE!!!

Zool's a big Amiga favourite, obviously, but Phil Cook from Nottingham did this rather splendid piccy that we thought also perfectly captured the appallingness of Nigel Mansell's ridiculously stupid moustache. We on AMIGA 'No beardyweirdies' POWER feel strongly about an over-abundance of facial hair, and hope that this picture shows the error of their ways to beard-wearers everywhere.

Cinematic themes have also been popular, with Neil Jack's Lemmings in the style of Cliffhanger being the best one so far (shown above). After all, which is the better role model for today's youth – Sylvester Stallone or one of those funny little 'blocker' guys? Similarly, these movie lemmings from Adrian Simpson in County Down showed that you don't have to be any good at drawing to come up with a few good well-executed ideas.

'IN THE STYLE OF' PREVIEW

FEATURES

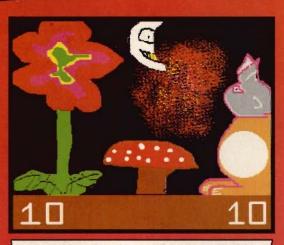

"What the...?!?!" – as Marvel superheroes are so fond of saying. "You wanted pictures, so here's my attempt," said this person, who shall remain nameless. No we didn't, we wanted pictures in the style of something else, so you could at least have called your picture something, 'Rodland in the style of Dante's Inferno' maybe. Close, but no cigar, matey.

The exploding head pic, however, ranks as a contemporary da Vinci compared to the work of Edward Gallagher from Ayrshire, who sent in this "attempt at Syndicate in the style of Sensible Soccer." 'Attempt' just about covers it, though since it's such a good idea, we thought it deserved a certain measure of the media limelight.

On the subject of titles, the general consensus of opinion round here is that Max Rushden of Cambridge drew the picture first and then named it afterwards. Why? Well let's just say that 'Biplanes at night in the style of a pseudorabbit with a large explosion for the sake of effect' is a title that covers the subject matter so well, that we can't see how it happened any other way. Once again, it's a good idea, Max, but I'm afraid you score an incredible minus figure out of ten for artistic ability.

Making some kind of near-subversive comment is Marcus Cox from Leicester. This sort of game system one-upmanship's all very well, but where Marcus' idea falls down is the fact that most Mario games are actually better than Superfrog. Don't ask why. They just are. So don't write in complaining about it, okay?

A few people cottoned onto the fact that we love having our faces splashed across as many pages of the mag as possible, and so appealed to this vain side of our nature by doing pictures of us. Steve Richardson's Stuart in the style of Rainbow Islands is a bit of a goodie, as is Chris Blackwell's Walker in the style of Linda Barker. Nice one!

AMIGA

Anyway, there's a few suggestions here for the rest of you to think about – and, as they say, keep 'em coming!

> At last! Returning to the original roots of this idea, we have Chris Warde's Desert Strike in the style of Sensible Soccer. Or the other way round. Possibly.

Putty featured in numerous offerings, presumably because the main character's a small round blob and therefore requires little or no talent to draw. The best ones were from Richard Bannister from Kidderminster and Gillian Barwell from Copthorne, and you really don't want to see the rest.

Agh! It's like a massive vortex sucking you in. You are doomed! Probably.

(Bloodhouse)

We are of course alluding to the demo we gave away on issue 28, which some of the cretins that work here at AMIGA POWER (not me, of course) were complaining was too hard. Tch. James Musselwhite of Dorset claims to have finished the thing in ten minutes, and in supplying these tips brings to light two rather important questions: (a) are the majority of AP readers better at playing Amiga games than the people who work for the magazine itself?, and (b) are we getting a bit desperate if we're printing tips for a cover-game demo? The answer to these questions is a quite definite: probably. But here's the tips anyway:

To start off, remember to always hold the fire button down! Straight away go right to the BOTTOM RIGHT of the screen. At 2930 time units make your

(MicroProse)

If you own a copy of Gunship 2000, then the following may make some sense to you, and unless we are very much mistaken, may even shed some light on how to get to grips with the game itself.

(ALMOST) TEN EASY STEPS TO SUCCESSFUL GUNSHIPPING

1. On any of your first missions, always select the Apache. Begin with missions in Central Europe as the rivers make excellent flying practice.

2. If you can, avoid using the 'simplified flight' option. Practising on a realistic setting will always pay off.

3. At the beginning of the game, use the computer as your co-pilot so that the chaff/flare and weapons are taken care of. But be careful because at times the copilot is not too bright and could easily launch a Hellfire at a Hind rather than a Stinger - or something equally stupid. 4. Practice your auto-rotation skills. It can save a pilot that you have invested a lot of time in developing.

5. When you qualify, use the Longbow Apache. It may not be as flash as the Comanche, but it carries more weapons and uses the new MMW Hellfire - a 'fireand-forget' type of missile. These enable you to pop up over a hill, fire, and duck back down before the enemy knows what's hit it (unless they've read this, that is). If you do have to use the Comanche, give your wingmen Apaches. The enemy will then lock onto the wingmen instead of the main helicopter, which is clearly to your advantage.

6. When learning to fly, use auto-pilot to stabilise your helicopter.

7. Always take Stingers with you as these are by far and away the easiest weapon to successfully hit other choppers with.

8. On your first mission as Commander, resist the temptation to fly without any help from the auto-pilot. You'll have enough problems trying to command the other aircraft as it is.

9. If you are given a specific objective to achieve it is preferable to do it yourself as opposed to continually monitoring your comrade's helicopter. Your team members are very unreliable until they reach the rank of Captain.

We pretty much covered this two months back, but here are a few extra pointers that might have passed you by. David Sutcliff of Oldham lets us know that after the computer has hit one of your bowls and the screen changes to the distant fielding view, you should press the Escape key. This will quit back to bowling before the computer had any time to make any runs. James Walker of Staffordshire says that if you hit a defensive shot and pause the game, wait for the ball to lift into the air, and unpause then you will be able to run as many times as you like. To get on to the next bowl, press Escape. Getting a team out for zero runs is another matter, for which you'll require the advice of Justin Cage of Birmingham. "Choose a fast bowler and bowl a full always swing and cut off his bat, so if you position two slips correctly, he'll hit it straight into their hands." And that's the last that I want to hear about Graham Gooch's World Class Cricket.

Where's the tea tent, eh? Thirsty work, this.

ACTION REPLAY POKES

"Never underestimate the value of the Action Replay poke," I was once told. "The Action Replay Poke is a sacred artifact, and should be held in the highest respect. Sure, the layman may say that an 'ARP' looks like nothing more than a bunch of numbers, but to the freelance journalist in a state of exponentially increasing desperation, once they're typed out into neat little columns, look how much space they fill." As ever, if you can't be bothered to read the instructions on your Action Replay cartridge to see how to use these codes for recent AP coverdisk demos, then don't expect any favours from us.

Thanks to Rajah Roy of London for these.

I didn't really think that this information was worth printing when Michael and Graham Kay of Scarborough originally wrote in, but since then they have re-written to complain at the absence of what they assure me would be valuable information to some. So, somewhat against my will, here it is. Load a game, select your players and chose to play Amateur. Play as per normal until you have putted the ball, then when the Mulligan option appears, click on 'old'. Your number of shots will have decreased by one. Repeat this until you are on stroke one. Now putt the ball and select the new position on the Mulligan screen for a 'hole in one'!

(Bullfrog)

This is exactly the sort of thing we've been going on about - a mini-play guide of a new game to run down the side of the Complete Control pages. This one for Bullfrog's excellent Syndicate and was sent in by Bryan Wadham of Portland. And let's use what remains of this available space to advertise just how much we like receiving these sort of thing, as an optimistically hopeful prompt to get more of you to them in. If you saw the size of the prize we're about to send Bryan, you'd want to

General Tippery

Before each mission start research into the Support Weapons and push the cash limit to the top. Until they run out, this will gain you an extra piece of equipment per mission, such as the Flamethrower on the first.

 Weapons dropped by other Syndicate agents contain very little ammo, whereas those dropped by police or guards are fully loaded. Pick up only valuable weapons on later missions because money may become short.

Always carry at least one Medi-Kit per agent and one Persuadertron in the group. Persuade as many enemy agents as possible until you have enough money to equip a team with Version 3 Modifications. After this, go on a major recruitment drive for new agents.

Now, that a big gun Mummyl

 Persuaded people will pick up weapons if led over a dead body that carries a weapon. Do not use adrenalin if an agent is carrying a Mini-Gun or similar heavy weapon. If you run short of cash when you're well into the game, raise the tax in every country by 100% then do not start any missions until the cash available goes up. If one of your group members is on fire, use the Medi-Kit on him pronto.

Assassination Missions

In later missions equip at least one agent in the squad with a Laser as these are far more accurate than the Long Range Rifle. Deploy at least two squad members if possible. If the target is hidden, a Gauss Gun would be advisable, fired from visual range so not to hit the wrong target.

Combat/Sabotage/Assault/ Reconnaissance Missions

Invest in a Flamethrower (for close range ambushes) for every member of the party. At least three Mini-Guns and a Medi-Kit should be issued per agent along with, if funds and development permit, a Gauss gun for Agent 3 (handy against large clusters of enemy agents) and a Persuadertron for the fourth. If it is possible to hide round the corner of a building, always ensure that the team is visible to you. Use the radar to check the whereabouts of the enemies. Any who come round the corners can be toasted with a Flamer or two. Mini-Guns or Uzis should deal with the rest.

Protect/Escort Missions

Stay well away from the person you are trying to protect to ensure they are saved from any stray bullets. Also do not use the Persuadertron on them or the mission will become uncompletable. In missions where you have to rendezvous, first take out all the enemy agents in the area.

Raid And Rescue

There is only one Raid And Rescue mission. It's basically a combat sweep but note that some people should be persuaded instead of fired at.

Persuasion Missions

Deploy three agents, four in the later missions. Try to lure any agents/guards into a position away from the mission's target before shooting them. Think about ambush tactics.

Equipment Acquisition Missions

Similar to the combat sweep but ensure that one agent has at least one free space in their inventory. If the R&D department have already constructed the weapon, you will be able to sell the one you pick up back to them. Weapons picked up during the course of the mission can also be utilised if it is necessary to fight back to the pick-up point.

The Atlantic Accelerator Mission

Arm your team as follows: Agent 1 - two Time Bombs, one Medi-Kit, one Mini-Gun, two Gauss Guns, two Forcefield Generators. Agents

2-4 - two Medi-Kits, five Mini-Guns, one Gauss Gun, one Forcefield Generator. All members should be equipped with Version 3 modifications. Effectively you will be using only the one agent for this mission, the others providing some sort of fallback if Agent 1 accidentally pops it.

Turn on all your forcefields. Send Agent 1 northwest then southwest to the first eastern walkway. Wait until he is joined by an enemy and when all firing ceases, de-activate all the forcefields, but remain still. The enemies will congregate - when you are sure (using the radar) that no more are coming drop a Time Bomb to kill all the baddies, activating Agent 1's forcefield after 40 seconds to minimise his damage. Re-group at Agent 1's position. Go northwest to the second walkway, northeast to the building and terminate the police. Give Agent 1 one of the Mini-Guns dropped and re-congregate outside.

Send Agent 1 northwest onto the second platform by himself. Manoeuvre around the building, proceed northwest until you reach a sheltered area leading to a walkway. Ensure your forcefield is active and, as before, wait until all the agents are on the same spot as Agent 1 and drop the Time Bomb when no more are incoming. Take out the three guard towers using Gauss Guns and Mini-Guns. After this proceed to the remaining bomb site, and follow the walkway round to the far northeast building on the right. Terminate the enemy shown by the radar to be in the building. He should be the last enemy (hooray!), unless there are any strays to the southwest who shouldn't be too hard to find.

t's that time again, time for your little cute alter-ego to undergo all manner of hideous tortures for your entertainment, and if you're ever so good at this game, then you'll be able to finish it entirely to the end, leaving you with a strong sense of beenthereseenthatdonethatness. Yes.

Level 8: It's That Carpet Again

A-B You're back on that magic carpet thing again, but at the end, you'll find the way blocked by the nasty flying demon that stole the princess. The demon's carrying the Vizier's magic Orb which gives him his strength, but whenever you hit it, his powers are drained. The demon's got three sequential attacks, and the first one's a swoop. The demon follows a clockwise path around you, so just stay in the centre of the screen.

Next, he uses the Orb and fires three energy bolts at you, and then his final attack's a direct

swoop towards you. Leave your evasive manoeuvres till the last minute, as if they're too early, he'll come after you. Once you've blasted him out of the sky, you can enter the Vizier's fortress.

Level 9: The Vizier's Ice Fortress

This is one of those slippy slidey 07 ice worlds, so the item that you really need are the crampons to stop you from slipping about so much. To get through each of the doors on this level, you have to melt the ice covering them, so you need to find blowtorches which are carelessly dotted around. Go through the doorway at the end of the first straight, avoid the icicles, the bomb and the snowman, and then duck under the spikes by taking a run-up and then sliding under them. You'll then be able to get the blowtorch. Carry on down the corridor and D you'll see a bomb in front of three doors. Through the first of these, you'll find another blowtorch and the crampons in the room with the chandeliers. There's also a hidden section containing an extra life.

 Through the second door, there's a lift going up, and in the first room on the left is the projectile sword, which you need for later on in the level. To avoid getting hit by the flying snowballs, you've got to jump up to the next ledge just as the snowball's launched from the one above.

There's a 'hole' lotta platforming going on – Mark Winstanley

F-G The next room up is for bonus points. Smashing the ice blocks in the room frees the snowman, but if you time it right, you can get away. The last room leads through lots of balls and chains to the next blowtorch, and on the way you can get an extra life and a chest containing a speed-up bonus. Whatever you do, don't ride the lift any higher than this.

The final door leads to four holes covered by breakable ice blocks, which is what you need the projectile sword for. Each of these four holes takes a slightly different route, but they all join up just before the final encounter with the despicable Vizier.

From left to right, the first hole has bombs guarding it, but if you go up to them and then jump clear, they'll blast a path for you. The first door takes you back, so don't bother with it, but further on is a room with falling platforms. You can avoid the bombs by jumping along the line, eventually meeting up with the path from hole two. J Through the second hole is a corridor in which a bomb walks along a platform above your head. You have to wait until it reaches the ice blocks before setting it off. The next room meets up with hole one.

K Drop into the pipes with the eyes to spring up, and there's another secret room next to the door on the right – you have to bash down the wall to get into it. The wall above and to the left of the two faces is fake, and inside is a special object. Continue along and you'll eventually arrive at the hole which leads to the evil Vizier.

In the room off the third hole, you'll find a speed-up bonus, which you need to get under the long row of spikes. Make sure you remove the crampons before attempting this, though, or alternatively, stand up four spikes along and you'll be able to get to a secret area containing more goodies.

L Stand on the marble column and leap off at the last moment, then head off to the right, and you'll arrive at the entrance to the last section.

Hole four is probably the easiest, and certainly the most fun. Simply hit the spring and duck, and you'll be shot back and forth, pushed up into other springs and finally arrive in another room. Carrying along from this, you end up with > the hole three route. There's also a secret place in the room with the ice and spring. Hack the wall away on the left side opposite the spring, then go over and hit the spring, then duck to slide under the wall. A spring on the other side lets you back out again, or you can climb the collapsing platforms to get a shield bonus. You can also jump through the ceiling on the right to get to the entrance to the last encounter.

Level 10: The Evil Vizier N The evil Vizier's a bit of a bad boy, and uses the powers of all the four elementals that you've already done. The order is: Wind, Water, Earth then Fire – first he tries to blow you into the spikes that come out of the wall behind you. Simply jump against the force of the wind to stop yourself being impaled.

O-P Next, spikes come out of the roof and bubbles force you up onto them. If you're still alive, you then get another chance to hack away at the Vizier, who attacks you with spinning bubbles.

C For the 'Earth' attack, the Vizier stands in the centre while blocks fly out of the walls at you. You've got to keep moving since they appear in line with you, and then just when you think you've survived, they start dropping from the roof.

Finally, he thinks he's just so smart when he stands in the middle of some spikes lobbing firey death in your general direction, but if you avoid it, the spikes will disappear, and all of a sudden, he's not that hard after all.

Smack him in, watch the ground swallow him up, and then you've completed the game and got the girl. It's truly a video-game ending, and the good guys have won again. Just like real life, eh kids?

bviously, the whole point of Dune 2 is that there isn't any set way to play the game, so rather than do some play-throughs, these hints are just that, helpful pointers that I've come up with from days of playing. Being a good guy at heart, I've been playing the Atreides, and so haven't been using weapons like the Ordos Deviator or the Harkonnen's Devastator tank. If you feel that there's anything regarding these weapons that we should all know about, then drop a line to that nice man Rich Pelley for his Complete Control section. Thanks.

Building Your Base

Clearly you should build a generator and spice-processing plant, but then what? The third vital post is the command centre, since it not only acts as a radar post, but is also needed to produce any new military units. You should have read the Mentat instructions properly, so you'll be in no doubt as to what the winning conditions are. If you're instructed to destroy the enemy in your sector, it's a pointless exercise to build spice silos, since you should be spending all available spice on your war effort. Similarly, if you need to amass spice to win the sector, you should only build enough weapon facilities to protect your harvesting operation

It makes sense to put troop and vehicle production installations at the front of your base, so new units can go straight onto the battlefield. Look at the space available on the rock, and work out where installations are going to go before you build them, and leave a one-block space around the edges to put in walls. Gun and missile turrets are a cheap way of protecting your bases and freeing up your mobile forces for offensive manoeuvres, but to save credits, only build fixed defences once you've worked out where the attacks are coming from, and reinforce them later when you've got credits to spare.

You need plenty of power to supply factories, outposts and spice refineries, and it's always a good idea to build more generators than you need, so that even if they get damaged, you'll have some reserve capacity. Enemy forces tend to target the wind traps for destruction, so make sure they're well defended. As you progress and the threat of Harkonnen Death-hand missiles comes into effect, you should space out your base by leaving bare concrete between the buildings, and making sure that similar buildings aren't together. If you put all the wind traps next to each other, then a single missile could cripple the base by cutting off all your power.

Repairing is much cheaper than rebuilding, so keep all your buildings in a good state by repairing them before they get too low. Many facilities can be upgraded, but will only give you this option if they're in perfect condition. Always upgrade as soon as possible to have the best range of stuff available.

Spice, Harvesting And All That Harvesting lots of spice is essential, but where there's spice, there's worms, so always take the wormsign warnings seriously and move all your units onto rock at the first sighting. Although it's possible to shoot the worms, it's not really worth the effort, and you're better off just running away from them.

Heavy factories can produce spice harvesters - to run the harvesting at full speed simply build an extra > harvester for each refinery. This way you can have one heading out empty and one returning full at all times.

The repair base should be as close to the front line as you can manage, so it'll reduce travel time for your vehicles.

The spice fields get used up pretty guickly, but you can replenish them by tripping over the sand mounds, which usually urges a sleeping worm to spew a load of new spice onto the surface. Since the hapless soldiers instantly get eaten, use either a damaged or a single infantry unit for this task, and try and do this when there's enemy units nearby, as they get swallowed up too. A final hint in this bit is that if any infantry turn up and start shooting at your harvester, rather than run away, just turn it round and run them over. Ha ha ha.

Battle For Arrakis

There's more to fighting than just funnelling new troops into the battle, and a bit of forethought can shorten your battles dramatically. Once you've found where the enemy is, your primary aim is to take the battle to his doorstep rather than just defending your own base, since as soon as you put him on the defensive, attacks on your base will start to slacken off.

To maintain the offensive, you need a short resupply line, and the best way of achieving this is to set up a new base just out of turret range using an MCV. As the battle progresses in your favour, you'll find that this forward base

What do you think this is then? It's a wall, isn't it? For crying out loud, you didn't need me to tell you that, did you? IT'S A WALL.

takes over in importance from your original one, which should end up as a safe base for your command and spice-harvesting operations. Now's the time to build a repair facility, since it doesn't take long to pull a damaged unit out of battle, and you save yourself the cost of having to build a new one

End Game

To win a combat scenario, you've got to flatten the enemy's base, so bear in mind that it's pointless wasting your troops blowing up enemy units when you could be destroying the factories that they're coming from. Similarly, you don't have to destroy gun turrets base, complete with repair facilities and lots of large guns.

or walls, so stay away from them if you can. Even though you can build tanks and missile weapons, infantry still play a vital part in this part of the game, as they're the only units who can enter enemy bases. Moving troops into bases will cause the unit to selfdestruct, causing far more damage than shooting at it, and if you can time it so that the building's damage bar's on red, you can capture it rather than destroy it.

The most important buildings to destroy are the construction site and the wind traps, which will deny the enemy the chance of rebuilding his base. Missile tanks are ideal for this task, as they've got a long range and pack a punch. Keeping them at their maximum range will mean that you can put a line of tanks or quads in front of them to protect them from attack, and they'll automatically fire away at the base. Next you should blast the refineries or the harvesters to choke off the credit supply that'll support any repairs or new units. Once you get to this stage, it's a simple matter of mopping up, as there's no way the enemy can recover from this spiral. Running over infantry in tanks is easier than shooting them, and since you can build new units, you can simply wear down the remaining defensive units and blow up or take over what's left of the base. Easy, eh? •

THE LAST RESORT

We all feel lost and lonely at times, so it's nice to know that there are people like Rich Pelley who we can turn to in our hour of need. What's he's been up to today?

I bet you can't guess what I've been up to today. That's right – I've been opening and sorting the thousands of letters that have have been posted to The Last Resort during the previous month. Except, well, that wasn't particularly exciting, so instead try to guess what I'm going to be doing this evening. (And, I'll just point out, it's not 'opening more of your letters' or anything stupid like that.) Give up yet? Well, in that case, I'll tell you. I'm going to be typing up your letters, answering all the queries that I can, lumping the ones I can't into Loose Ends and rectifying previous problems in Cases Closed. You're probably going to watch something good on telly. Or go down the pub. But I think we both know who is in for the most fun this evening.

LOOSE ENDS

These readers have jumped out of the aeroplane of Despair and pulled the rip-cord of hope, but have failed to open their parachutes. (Ahem.) Can you provide any life-saving back-up?

C "On level one of CADAVER – THE PAY OFF: (a) How do you get past the two flails? (b) What does the lever in the room where you blow the barrel up with the bomb do? And (c) what do you use the friendly slime for?" Michael Hall, Clwyd

Q "PUTTY is where my problem lies, specifically on level nine because I just can't get through it. Can anyone provide me with a walk-through of what to do, please?" Ben Sadler, Bradford

 "Hi! I've run into a bit of a problem in BLACK CRYPT. (A bit? This is quite possibly the longest question to ever appear in The Last Resort. In fact – let's celebrate. A prize for the first person to write in with all the answers. – Rich.) I've arrived to a dungeon at which there are four closed doors. After some time you gain access to four stairwells leading down to dungeons containing water, 'The Soultaker's Domain', a Medusa in the shape of a huge, floating skull and Ramdemons (demonic Minotaurs) respectively. I've cleared the water level but can't do the rest, and would therefore very much like to know the following:

(a) I've fought the Soultaker a dozen times but he always teleports away, so how should I deal with him? One passage is blocked by a teleporter which won't go away no matter what I try, another by pillars. I've located a wall with three skulls on which certain crowns can be placed, but I've only found one which fits.

(b) The Medusa is invulnerable to my weapons and magic, so how can I kill her? I've opened a door with a mirror key and behind it was an identical door. I know where a second mirror key can be found but when I try to take it, it teleports away. There is also a passage which is blocked by an invisible teleporter. How should I use the Ring of Demajen?

(c) In the dungeon of the Ramdemons there is a hole which you can go down (but not up). I've found a locked door, an 'O' key, some Blackjack armour and some pillars blocking the way as usual. How do I get up from the hole? Where is the key to the door? Where does the 'O' key go? What's the purpose of the Blackjack armour and how do I pass the pillars?

Phew! That should keep you busy for some time!" Jonas Lindholmer, Sweden

WANTED – A knight in shining armour to help me fight my way through SPIRIT OF EXCALIBUR by Virgin. In episode four I have discovered the Kings at LLanbadarnm, the White Tower and a townsman at Gloucester. I have visited Canterbury to get Helye's Book, talked to the scholar at Rochester and gone straight to Exeter. But here, no matter what I do I cannot bribe the townsman to tell me where Merlin is. I have even used the game's in-built hints but these just tell me to do what I am already doing which, as you can imagine, is driving me absolutely bananas." A Kelly, Southampton

C "In FUTURE WARS I have reached the Churgon planet and gotten off the ship with the invisibility pill. But it keeps wearing off and I get captured." GDC Byrne, Dublin

 "Help! On F/A-18 INTERCEPTOR mission four, how do you rescue the pilot or launch the pod? After killing the two MiGs I circle around frantically pressing keys, but nothing happens!" Ben Cassie, Cornwall

Q "THUNDERHAWK is giving me problems. What do you have to do on the first mission of the Alaska campaign? The briefing tells me only to fire if fired upon, so I fly around ice station Omega blowing up things as they shoot at me, yet when I return to HQ to re-arm I get sent home. It just isn't fair!" ARMY MOVES

•"I know it's an old game but can anyone dig out a cheat for Army Moves? I've only ever managed to reach level two but I've had the game since I was knee-high to a grasshopper's son. Oh, and sorry about the illegible childish handwriting, but I'm only 8." Alex (age 8), Dorset

A cheat, you say. Well, try getting an adult to help you type in KARENBROADHURST (the name of the programmer's girlfriend – you'll learn all about 'girls' soon) during play for infinite energy. Also, hold down the ALT, 1 and D keys together for immunity during part one, and ALT, 1 and J during part two. And you can go straight to part two with the code 101069.

GOBLIINS 2

On level two, I'm stuck in two screens. In the KAEL screen I cannot give the honey to the Nymph while in the TOM screen I am unable to get the ball because a small boy always gets to it first. Any ideas?" Pedro Abreu, Portugal

A On KAEL, get Winkle to lift the stone so that Fingus can ride the bee over to the Nymph and hand over the honey. And on TOM, you have to pinch the ball back off the boy. This time send Winkle off to the boy in the house and Fingus to the top right house and you should be able to snatch it back.

INDIANA JONES AND THE FATE OF ATLANTIS

"I am in the circular Lost City of Atlantis, I have found where Sophia is kept and killed the guard guarding her, but when I open the jail cell she will not come out – she says that it isn't safe. I can't get across the canal either."

A Ignore Sophia – you'll be rescuing her later. To get across the canal you need to remove the octopus and place an orichalcum bead in the mouth of the crab raft. How do you remove the octopus? By using a trapped crab. Get the crab by collecting the rib-cage from the subway (found on the outer passageway on the overhead map), baiting it with the sandwich (made out of from the bread from the sub with the cold cuts), and dropping it in the crab room.

 "I'm stuck. You've probably heard that one before, but even so, can you shed any light on how the hell you solve level 49?"

A Unfortunately I probably have even less of a clue about this one than you do having never actually played the game, let alone got stuck on on of its later levels. What I do have though is a list of passwords, of which (a-ha!) here's the one for level 50: 12294.

A "On the aeroplane: go into the toilets and use the toilet paper with the sink. Then turn on the tap and, after a suitable amount of time, press the call button. While the stewardess is clearing up the mess quickly dart to the front of the plane and use the egg (from inside the fridge in your apartment) with the microwave and then switch it on. to his castle you have to play 'Wizeroids'. But how are you meant to beat Zark's high score of over 50,000? James Bachellier (age 10), Paignton

A There are two ways to beat Zark's high score: (a) practice, or (b) cheat. (a) probably speaks for itself, so let's elaborate a little on (b). Slowly thrust up to the top of the screen until you are at such a point that you have disappeared off the top but have not yet re-appeared at the bottom. You probably don't need me to tell passengers' heads until you find the oxygen tank. Pick this up.

At the cave in Seattle: pick up the branch outside the cave and use this with the fire pit. You can then use the bird's nest with the branch in the pit, and in turn you will be able to use the lighter on the substances in the pit to give yourself some light. The squirrel's nest is irrelevant at this point in the game. You don't have to read the strange markings, simply use the yellow crayon (from the cupboard under the sink in your apartment) on the markings." Daniel Watkins, Bucks

And Mark Ashbury of Banbury simply asked "How do I escape off the plane before it lands?"

A "You do not have to leave the plane before it lands. Simply press the right fire button to arrive at your destination, not forgetting to follow the advice I've given above." Daniel Watkins, Bucks

Elena Ruggeri of Luton wasn't having much luck at beating Ozric the Octopus.

A "When Ozric spits, jump his fire, and when he submerges, move over the bubble he blows. When the bubbles cease, move a couple of inches to the left. By this time a fish should have jumped out of the water where you were previously standing, so turn and hit the fish towards squid-face. Repeat this several times (Ozric's eyes will enlarge if a successful strike was made) you that provided you don't move you are now in an invulnerable position, so blast away and rake up that score.

PRINCE OF PERSIA

 "I have got to level 12 but don't know how to complete it. Can you help?" A Worried P Of P fan

A I could help, but your request for help is about as specific as phoning the AA and giving no more details other than you've broken down on the M4. Write remembering to dart to the left edge to avoid the third saliva ball fired at you." Stuart Handcock, Birmingham

ASSASSIN

Q You wouldn't believe how stuck Simon Lake of Devon was beneath the crane down the entrance shaft.

A "Er, Simon, stop being so crap. Keep going down, head left until you reach the base of the level and cling onto the ceiling and go right to the end. (This is help? – Rich)" Simon Dominguez, Essex

LURE OF THE TEMPTRESS

Two issues back Steven Scott of Hants asked how to get into the hall where Goewin is held, and in a rather pathetic attempt to keep up my image as Top Amiga Game Expert, I secretly browsed through issue 18 and stole the answer. Except it transpires that I wasn't much very help after all.

A "Sure, you require a disguise, but gaining it isn't easy. Take the flask and break into Taidgh's house using the lockpick Grub handed to you. Light the burner with the tinder box and when steam rises use the flask on the tap. Get of the house and when nobody is about drink the potion. You will now be disguised as Selena, and the guards will toolishly let you in." Christopher Trigg, London

In AP29 (yup, AP29 – these 'Cases Closed' enthusiasts are pretty dam quick off the mark, you know) Poels Tim (from Belgium) was thirsty for Chani-rescuing advice.

A "If all the forts have been captured, Chani will be found. Use more espionage troops, and visit every fort after it falls to find and interrogate the Harkonnen captain (if there is one). And during a fight, ask troops with weirding modules to search for new equipment – they should find atomics at one of the forts, at least." Dominic Conneally, Metallica fan on't know about you, but I was never too fond of any RPGs up to the time of Beholder 2. It was the puzzles that got me; their 'solve this or - ha! - you can't get any further' nature I found frustrating, unnecessary and bereft of realism.

Things changed with Ishar and its sequel, which, by offering freedom of movement and superior character interaction, looked great on paper. (Can't say I've played them, though.) Then came Might and Magic 3, which was not only far bigger, but by allowing exploration outside any one particular puzzle provided scope, authenticity and just the sort of inspiritment you needed (Rich, I'm not going to tell you again about this 'making-up-new-wordswhen-you-can't-think-of-the-proper-one' business. - Ed). Character interaction was enhanced as you inevitably found yourself popping into temples, shops, banks, taverns, inns and such, usually for something more vital than a friendly hello. And then there was Legends of Valour, which I seem to remember reading a review of, once. The RPG to end all RPGs, apparently. Texture-mapped graphics, hundreds of different routes through the game, and not a statistic or dice roll in sight.

Judging by the press release, Blade looked promising. A conversion of a German PC game which took an original team of over 20 full-time programmers over a year to pen, the Amiga version has been voted Game of the Year by such discerning publications as Amiga Joker (whoever they may be). We are promised auto-mapping, archetypes for individual characters, unique 'negative' attributes such as Superstition and Phobias, computer-controlled allying characters, over 200 spells, a stand-alone charactergeneration program, the option to split your party, over 52 towns and villages and realistic weather. But is it any good? Time to load up, circumspect, and report back, I think. Don't go away. Well. I certainly found it

9 friendly. In its disfavour (Right, off that's it. You're fired. - Ed) I found the visual similarity of the buildings exasperating at times - until I had a the rough layout of the area committed to memory I needed a diskaccessing peek at the map at almost ever corner. (Why they couldn't have the word 'Tavern' above the taverns, or 'Shop' above the shops is beyond me.) As ever, you can almost hear the box tittering as you open it and the manual sniggering if you've only got one meg and no hard drive, but even with my A500's mere half-meg upgrade and one external floppy drive, the minimal disk swapping and forfeit of sound seemed quite reasonable considering how large an adventure I was playing.

And large it is too. I'm not sure quite how far I got (over 400 hours of gameplay are promised), but I kind of got the feeling that if Blade of Destiny was an ice-cream Snickers, I've hardly even been treated to a peanut (Blimey. - Ed). Having reached a third village, there was still no sign of the nine map pieces I was after (joined together these would show me the location of The Blade of Destiny, which I could use to kill the Orc Chief and beat the game). Going by disk numbers, Blade is approximately twice the size of Beholder 2 - which, suffice to say, means that it's probably huge. The biggest D&D clone to date. I'd expect.

The thing is, having seen

opulous and Sim City were the stepping stones for god sims as we perceive them today, but where Populous has do, the more been surpassed so thoroughly by its spin-offs and its follow-up that these days a game on the original probably feels a little crude, the evolution of Sim City was not so successful. We tried Sim-ing the Earth, Ants and Life itself, but these games were both too ambitious and unrelated to our own perceptions, so we still liked Sim City best. Hungry enthusiasts were more likely to feed their megalomaniac brains with A-Train (or the previous similar Railroad Tycoon), seeking power through railways, but there was no other choice than that until Impressions' Roman variation, Caesar. But just how people certainly aren't ng to get caught out looking dull at a toga party.

would you explain the appeal of a good god sim to aliens? The answer is of course you wouldn't - you'd run away shouting "Aarrrgh - aliens!" Only when you were safe in bed would you think maybe it's the power, maybe it's the creativity or, as I reckon, maybe it's the way the better you do, the more problems you create.

Here in Caesar Deluxe, for example, building a forum, linking in a water supply, sticking in a few roads, maybe a baths or two and encouraging some settlers is no problem. Thought must then go into improving conditions for your plebeians, introducing amenities, businesses and entertainment. Watch where you put things land values will rise if housing is placed next to a market or temple, but problems you plebs will object to living near a factory (yet markets, factories and workshops must be in close proximity). to agree - but rather less enthusiastically, because the 'added game' seems to be a more-than-coincidental hint of Populous. The colour scheme? The little men who walk around to show activity? The city walls, towers and forts? It might just be me, but especially in the battle scenes, it does look very reminiscent of a kind of Populous 'from above'.

So what of it? Aside from a strangely wobbly cursor and fairly rudimentary graphics, there is little to fault in Caesar Deluxe - apart from criticising its very existence. We've established that, great as it was, Sim City was a bit of a dead end for nicking ideas from. You can't simulate anything more complicated than a city (it gets too complicated - or too boring), so simulating cities in other time zones seems the only option. And in this case, those without a special fondness for the Roman Empire are likely to prefer the present day, which (insert vicious circle

Perhaps the fantasy approach of the mythical Populous or the futuristic Syndicate is the answer? Anyway, I always preferred the straight win-or-lose aspect of Populous and Mega-lo-mania to the play-until-you-give-up style of play found here.

Caesar Deluxe tries hard, but it is unlikely to win any prizes for its efforts 20 minutes later. You might also like to spend another £29.99 on Impressions' Cohort 2 to use in conjunction with Caesar to act out all the battles. This is interesting, if a little expensive, but probably isn't everybody's overall cup of tea. • RICH PELLEY

UPPERS It's very easy to get into, it's very easy to play and what with the prospect of promotion to take over new cities, there's (probably) quite some scope to it.

NAPOLEONICS

arefoot skiing on sandpaper. Watching the entire series of Eldorado in one go. Being stuck in a lift with Esther Rantzen. Eating something bought at Kentucky Fried Chicken. I would rather do any of these than have to endure Napoleonics again. (The rest of us, of course, like nothing better than a nice KFC every now and again. Yum yum. - Libel Ed)

I mean, ha ha, it's a joke, right? No? You mean someone's seriously trying to sell this commercially?

Napoleonics is a compilation of three 'classic' strategic war sims by a certain Dr Peter Turcan recreating three Napoleonic campaigns -Austerlitz, Borodino and Waterloo. Well, when I say 'recreate', I use the loosest possible meaning of the term - a few dozen matches, a marble and liberal doses of tomato ketchup would capture the atmosphere better.

The originals have their fans, but I honestly can't fathom out why. Even the most rabid wargaming fanatic has got to admit that despite their laudable historical accuracy, as gaming experiences they're excruciatingly dull.

They don't exactly use the Amiga to its full ability. To be honest, they look like they'd be hard-pressed to push a Sony calculator to its limits. They're strategy games so primitive, so basic, so completely devoid of anything that'd make them even vaguely playable that they're about as exciting as playing chess by post. Ah, some people actually enjoy doing that, though. Perhaps they're Wellington (the Brits' top man at Waterloo) or Kutusov (some Russian geezer that history's forgotten). If you can get anyone else to play (which is unlikely) they can take control of the opposing forces, otherwise the computer steps in to do the business.

Basically, all you do is give commands. Up to eight orders can be hopelessly out issued per turn, and each turn lasts 15 minutes of game time. You can only give orders to the generals directly below you in the chain of command;

they then interpret them and send them down the ranks to individual platoons. And that's about it. Apparently the

told what colours the regiment is wearing, or what town or landmark you're pointing at. Hopeless.

Napoleonics is characterised more by what it doesn't have than what it does. And what it doesn't have is just about everything that would make it the least bit playable.

DAVE GOLDER

UPPERS Well, nobody's forcing you to buy it.

DOWNERS Just about everything. The lack of care that's gone into the game is almost insulting. More effort seems to have been put into the historical research than the programming. The graphics are the worst I've seen in ages (including the stuff I get in for PD) and the control system is excruciatingly complex.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Frankly I can't see why this has been released. It's so primitive, it's like being whisked back to the dawn of home computing. Napoleonics really has very little to recommend it, except maybe historical research. You would have be seriously into strategic wargaming or obsessed with Napoleon to derive even the faintest hint of enjoyment out of it.

THE BOTTOM LINE The little messages from your troops flash up even faster, making them even more impossible to read.

Morph's undergone a transformation -

Game: Morph – Enhanced A1200 Version Publisher: Millennium Author: Peter Johnson Price: £25.99 Release: September 21

orph A1200 Version - it's like Morph, only with 50% more levels! (Silence from assembled audience.) Um. Morph, eh? What a terrific, puzzley game. And now, thanks to Morph A1200 Version, it's got 50% more levels! (If you've got an A1200, that is.)

(Steady drumming of fingers.)

Right. If that's the way you want it. You will, of course, have read Tim's review of Morph in AP27. He gave it 86%, on the grounds that it's one of the most orignal, enjoyable puzzle games to have appeared in ages.

As usual, the idea's simple enough. You're a little round blob with eyes and a mouth. And your precise form and capabilities depend upon the state you're currently in - solid (in which case you're very heavy, and can roll around), liquid (you can flow through gratings), gas (when you can float upwards) and bouncy solid (when you can bounce around). And you change from state to state by waggling

yet again

blinked! I win

the joystick in the appropriate manner. But beware! You've only got a limited number of each sort of transformation - usually just the right number to make it through the current level. Once they're all gone, it's game over. (Or, at least, back to the start of the level again.) Luckily, though, extra transformations are dotted about the place, and occasionally you'll find yourself having to pass through a transformation block that'll change you whether you like it or not.

There are other obstacles, of course. Like, er, fans, pools of acid, spikes, fire, that kind of thing. You're vulnerable to each one when you're in certain states, so to make it through each level you've got to make sure you're in the right state at the right time. And you can only move in some directions if you're in the right state, too. (Like, to move upwards for any distance you've got to be the little cloud.) The levels are arranged into four worlds which you can tackle at your leisure, so if you get stuck on one puzzle you can switch your efforts to a different world.

What's so good about it? The puzzles have been extremely well designed - they start off easy, but get incredibly (almost frustratingly) difficult is there anyone in the bathroom? It seems so.

it's all very jolly and cute. It's a pretty even blend of thinking, dexterity and going-along-a-bit-and-dying-butremembering-not-to-make-the-samemistake-next-time, which has got to be a good thing. It's not something you're likely to return to once you've finished it, but that shouldn't be for ages. And it's not for everyone - you really do have to think very hard all the time.

again? Because the A1200 version has come out. And it's got 50% more levels! (Come on. You've made it this far. - Ed)

I know, I know. It's got 50% more levels, WHICH MEANS that if you barely made it to the end of the ordinary version alive, this new extended version will put your very soul in jeopardy. A1200 owners - now there's a version of Morph especially for you. JONATHAN DAVIES

UPPERS Morph's a great game that, if it lacks anything, lacks levels. But this new 36-stage version (and that's 50% more!) corrects even that potential flaw, giving you loads more playing time for your money. The levels (after the first few) are much harder than the ones in the A500/600 version too, and the graphics have all been touched up into the bargain.

DOWNERS Don't expect any really extraordinary advances graphics-wise, though. And, unless I'm missing something, couldn't the A500 version have had the extra levels in the first place?

THE BOTTOM LINE

It might only be scoring 1% more than the normal version, but it's a big, important 1%. Morph was a top puzzler that could only be improved by being enlarged and toughened up. And now it has been.

LOOM

Publisher: Kixx XL Price: £14.99 Release: Out now

When you think of the most glamorous and exotic trades and professions, what is it that springs to mind? Medicine's always a good one, isn't it? There's plenty of appeal in the romantic image of the healer. I always thought that a lutemaker was something special too – imagine being able to make musical instruments as well as play them. I never, in my most bizarre imaginings, thought of a weaver. At the end of the day, a piece of cloth is just a piece of cloth (I don't care if it's a really fancy bit of elaborate tapestry, it's still a bit of old cloth) and weaving it, no matter how skilled a craft it may be, isn't in the least bit romantic.

Strange, then, that Loom should feature, as its central theme, weaving. It's easy to see how the idea could have come about – there they all were, at the end of the evening, trying to work out whether they should do the washing up or open the brandy, when a slurred voice said "Hey, man, have you ever thought about the term 'spell weaving'? I mean, like, wouldn't it be funny, right, if, like, when you cast a spell in a game, you had to actually, like, weave it, man?" And so a game was born.

For all that, though, it's really rather splendid. It's a Lucasfilm point-and-click adventure with exquisite graphics and a rather entertaining structure which prevents you from being killed out of the game. If you foul up, you foul up, and you get another chance to have a go at solving the puzzle. It was, they claim, designed to be finished. If only life were like that.

I was chatting to the famous Tim Tucker the other day and we came to the conclusion that if there was a magazine in Heaven it would look like AMIGA POWER. I'd like to add to that the suggestion that if there are adventure games in Heaven, they'll probably be written by those nice people at Lucasfilm/Lucasarts/whatever they are now.

• TIM NORRIS

THE BOTTOM LINE A really rather splendid little adventure game, even if it is centred around the rather prosaic art of weaving.

(more tapping sounds) more like 120 kmh, or a less impressive 75 miles per hour, by my sums...

Yeah, I know. Letters of complaint to the usual address, please. Don't forget to mark your envelope 'You really have plumbed new depths of tedious nit-picking this time', so that we can throw them straight in the bin and cut out the middle man. But it IS sloppy, isn't it? Or is it just me?

Anyway. On with the review, and factual information fans join us just in time to find out that this *Pole Position*style driving game features precisely 17 international tracks with hills and tunnels, four different cars for you to drive, and two different types of game structure.

Tackling this array of statistics in reverse order, we find that the two different game types are 'Arcade' mode, which is a straight finish-in-thetop-three-or-it's-Game-Over stuff, and

Publisher: The Hit Squad Price: £9.99 Release: Out now

There should be a prize for the best guess at just what the 'Mean' in Mean 18 means. Does it mean the mathematical mid-point of 18? If so, why not save the printers the time and effort in typography and just call it 'nine'? If it means 'average' then the Hit Squad should definitely prepare for a preemptive libel case. It is without question below average, m'lud. Or maybe it's due to the asking price of a tenner still being a bit on the mean side and they really want 18 quid. Either way, my money's staying firmly in my mean old pocket.

Golf has always struck me as a game that, despite the undisputed skill involved, is ultimately as pointless as a dog chasing a car. Grown men and women hit a ball with their expensive sticks as far as they can. The further the better. No sooner has this been done than they chase after it, only to hit it away again! Apparently executives play golf as an aid to decision-making and for relief. Send your 'Does executive relief make you blind?' letters to The Hit Squad, alright?

'Normal', in which you race on every track regardless of your performance and accumulate championship points, just like real life.

'Arcade' mode is, frankly, a disaster. It's shockingly easy (the difficulty increases as you go through the tracks, but never gets beyond 'laughably simple'). Don't bother with a qualifying lap, just start at the back of the grid, drive up the extreme right of the track where nothing can hit you, and you'll be fourth out of 22 by the time you reach the end of the pit lane. You'll overtake the other three cars inside two-thirds of a lap at the very most (they weave from side to side in what appears to be a completely nonintelligent manner and are hence easy meat), leaving you to just play out the rest of the three laps without crashing into any of the back-markers who you'll meet roughly halfway through the last lap, travelling at about 150 kmh (game speed, that is). Most of the time, then, you won't see another car on your travels - you might have thought Jaguar XJ220 was tragically low on action and thrills, but this leaves it way behind for tedium.

'Normal' mode, however, rescues things somewhat. There are three

ow here's a funny thing. 3324 metres is more or less two miles, right? And 303 kmh translates to around 190 miles per hour, right? So if I was to travel round a 3324-metre track at 303 kmh, starting at full speed, you'd expect it to take about (insert sound of calculator keys being tapped here) 36 seconds, or one hundredth of an hour, yes? So how come when I try it on the Brazil track of F17 Challenge, it takes me a minute and three-quarters on the game's own clock? That comes to tracks, hence

'F17'. Maybe.

It's odd, but 'mean' isn't the first word that springs to mind when someone says 'golf'.

Unfortunately, there's no relief from the tedium of this game. Nothing much distinguishes one hole from the other. The graphics are flat and boring and suffer from the kind of dithering that could be called an out-and-out stutter (Computing joke. We're sorry. - Ed). In fact, the only saving grace is that you may find yourself coming over all squidgy and sentimental about the halcyon days of the good old C64. Regrettably, Mean 18 has none of the gameplay or charm that the old workhorse's games could muster.

If you like collecting porcelain figurines or watching laundry dry then this might be your kind of game. For everyone else, and that includes all you weirdo golf fans, stay clear.

STEVE McGILL

THE BOTTOM LINE

Okay, it's only a budget game, but it really is worth saving up the few extra quid for PGA Tour, or even going the whole hog on Nick Faldo's. This is cheap, but it's very nasty.

difficulty settings (though it's still not at all hard), you can save the game at any time (lose, by some fluke of carelessness, in 'Arcade' mode and you're straight back to the very start), you can alter the number of laps to 5, 8, 10 or 15, and the damage feature present in both modes (every time you collide with something you get damaged, and if you don't have a pitstop to repair it, you'll slow down and eventually trash your car completely) starts to take on some kind of worthwhile meaning, as the backmarkers take their toll on your car and you're forced into pitstops, which give your opponents a chance to catch up and make the game a bit more interesting. It's sort of like playing F1GP in the arcadiest mode possible, but not as pretty. Which brings me (and quite cleverly I thought) to the 17 different tracks.

Oh dear. What we actually have

HILL STREET BLUES

Publisher: Buzz Price: £9.99 Release: Out now

Unfortunately I've never seen Hill Street Blues. I've seen just about every episode of Cagney And Lacey (twice, probably), one or two St Elsewheres, and loads of LA Laws, but not a single Hill Street Blues. And, even more unfortunately, Stuart started his review of the game Hill Street Blues (in AP2, where he gave it 70%) in exactly the same way.

I will begin to deviate from Stuart's review eventually, but not just yet. First I'd better get all the explaining stuff out of the way, and, unless I lie, it's bound to sound similar. The thing is, you're in charge of a precinct which is represented as a bird'seye-view, Sim City-style, scrolling (after a fashion) map. Cars drive around the streets, stopping at traffic lights and everything. People walk about (and lead actual, identifiable lives - there are about 400 of them altogether). It goes dark at night. It looks great.

But as well as decent, upstanding citizens, your precinct is populated by criminals, who go about committing crimes ranging from bag-snatching to serial killing. And that's where you come in. You're in charge of a police force, and as reports of crimes come in you've got to assign officers to investigate them, and get them to check out the scene and interview suspects. You've got little police cars to put them in, and they've got guns they can shoot people with (if it comes to that). Thanks, too, to really detailed graphics and some smashing digitised pictures of some trees and billboards at the side, the occasional tunnel or shower of rain, and that's your lot. DI And as for the four different cars you can drive... oh, I can't be bothered. STUART CAMPBELL

THE BOTTOM LINE

'Arcade' mode is dismally badly thought-out, but if you stick to the 'Normal' mode, this is an okayish racer. It's still not as good as, say, Continental Circus, though, and it's a fiver more expensive. It's dull, to be totally honest, PERCEN and definitely the low point of Team 17's career so far.

n a world where simplicity and accessibility are usually considered to be the most desirable attributes of almost everything (with the possible exception of the video recorder), it's refreshing to know that people are still keen to try to make me play an incredibly complex game. Midwinter 2 – Flames Of Freedom (or is it the other way round?) is big. No, really. When you get a 179-page manual, you usually expect it to be that big because it contains all the instructions in four languages. Not so here, oh no. The whole thing is in English and all of it is important if you want to play the whole game. Does that give you some impression of its bigness?

Thankfully, you can get involved in the whole thing straight away, without having to read all the manual, and it's possible to play Midwinter 2 as either an action game, a tactical game or a full-blown action/tactical/strategy game. But what, you ask impatiently, is it all about?

If only I had 179 pages, I'd tell you. Suffice it to say that you're a secret agent (though quite what profit there'd be in being any other sort of agent is beyond me - you'd not get far behind enemy lines if you wore a big placard saying 'Hello, you chaps, I'm an agent' or, say, took out an ad in their local paper announcing your intention to spy on them and sabotage their war efforts). Anyway, it's the future, you're an agent (either male or female) and you've got absolutely loads of agenting to do.

Some of the action is point-andclick stuff, some is polygon-3Dmoving-about-the-landscape stuff and there's always plenty to think about. There are also plenty of ways of getting about the place, including my personal favourite - the hot air balloon. Did I ever tell you about the time I took control of a hot air balloon in the clear skies over Berkshire? Well, there we were, in our lovely wicker basket... (Snip. - Ed)

There's just so much to it. Have I mentioned that it's big? I know that big isn't necessarily beautiful but in this case, big also equates to complex, and in the world of adventurey strategy-type things, complexity is generally considered to be a Good Thing.

It's a pointillist sort of viewpoint. (And that's a poor art joke.)

se Sex of Immy

And you're not allowed to answer Yes please".

The worst thing a chap can say in these circumstances is that this is just the sort of thing you'd like if you like this sort of thing. But, er, that's pretty much the case here (You're fired. -Ed). If you want an absorbing game that'll keep you busy for decades, then this one's definitely for you. But it takes a goodly long while to get into it, which means that if you haven't got the patience for strategy-type games and you can't be bothered to read big fat manuals, then you'll never get past the training section and find out what all the fuss is about.

It's not the best game ever by any manner of means, but as a budget release it seems slightly more worthy of a bit of praise. It's just so big. • TIM NORRIS

THE BOTTOM LINE It's so big. It's huge.

FORMULA ONE CHALLENGE + TOKI

It's just like getting told off by the headmaster. I promise to be early. Always.

the show's cast, it's all very realistic.

But it's so true-to-life that, all the time I was playing it, I felt like I really was in charge of a police force. And that I really ought to be paid for organising everyone's lives for them. (Which you were, actually – Ed.) Doing it for free just didn't seem right, somehow, and rather boring.

The other thing that seemed a bit odd is the way that you have to tell every single policeman exactly what to do the whole time, right down to getting in and out of his/her police car, arresting people and even simply walking about. There's probably an icon in there somewhere to wipe their noses for them. And while you're making one policemen walk into into a building to question someone, there could be fifteen others just lounging around in their cars waiting for you to take them by the hand and point them in the right direction. Something in the way of artificial intelligence might have been nice.

Hill Street Blues is a really detailed game, and a creditable attempt to do something logical (and a bit different) with a licence rather than blundering in with a walking-about-shooting-people approach. But I found it all a bit tedious and, unless you're an ultra-patient strategy game fan, I think you will too.

• JONATHAN DAVIES

THE BOTTOM LINE

Nice to look at, and the theme tune is solidly represented. It's a step in the right direction as far as licences are concerned. But its very detail rapidly got on my nerves, and I never found myself actually enjoying it.

FORMULA ONE CHALLENGE

Publisher: Amivision Price: £9.95 Release: Out now

Sometimes I think management sims are the best thing in the world. Ever. Sometimes I think they're something of a waste of everybody's time. Completely.

In the first case, what you get is the chance to immerse yourself utterly in someone else's world. You make all the decisions and the mighty computer works out the consequences of your actions. The illusion is utterly convincing and whole days can pass by without you noticing. (Mere days? Weeks, surely. – Ironic Ed)

The latter case leaves you wondering why you bothered. Instead of waiting with bated breath while the computer computes its computations, you tap the mouse button impatiently, desperately wanting the whole thing to be over so you can watch Star Trek.

Formula One Challenge (version 4) falls, sadly, with a disappointing splat into the latter category. There's nothing actually wrong with it, as such, but it just doesn't have any pizzazz, any zing, any, er, some other word with a 'z' in it.

You are, in a very virtual sense, the manager of a Formula One racing team. Armed with only a few hundred thousand quid, you must buy some engines, hire some drivers and equip your team to take on the might of McLaren, Williams, Benetton and all the rest. There's a moderately neat graphic interface where you make your managerial choices (tyres and stuff) and then the race storms off.

You watch a leaderboard with occasional comments as to what's going on. On the face of it, it's a corking idea.

I'm a bit of a fan of the old motor car brmm brmm racing, and I thought I was in for a bit of a treat with this one. But no. It just doesn't have whatever it is that makes these things fab. Errors and sloppiness aside (Nigel Mansell isn't in the 1993 season, chaps, and when the weather changes from 'heatwave' to being merely 'sunny', 'the weather deteriorates' is scarcely a way to describe it), it does have a certain charm. There's plenty of detail in there for F1 enthusiasts, but precious little to enthral them for long. Sorry.

• TIM NORRIS

THE BOTTOM LINE

Whatever the magic formula is for the perfect management sim, Formula One Challenge just hasn't found it. Oh, and isn't Nigel Mansell racing Indy cars in America this year?

HARDBALL Publisher: The Hit

Squad Price: £9.99 Release: Out now

You've got to be well hard and on the ball if you want to get very far with this primeval (well, 1987) offering from The Hit Squad. Your stamina's going to get severely tested, so load up with crisps, lemonade and crunchy popcorn if you want to stay with the pace. Well, your stamina isn't really going to get tested at all, more likely your attention span.

Nevertheless, it has to be stated that there aren't too many baseball games on the go. Is that a good thing or a bad thing? You're the audience, you decide. What do you mean, that's my job?

Ah. Stuart's just told me it IS my job, so here goes. Hardball harks back to the days when men were men, women were women and Joe Theismann still had a serviceable knee and the highest pay cheque in American Football (yes, that long ago). Despite the visually-challenged graphics, it does have a certain amount of charm in a sentimental old kind of way. There are a certain amount of incidental control and selection details to show that some considered thought has been put into the gameplay. Well, a bit, anyway. Competition against another human being is considerably more stimulating and gratifying to the soul, karma, psyche, darma, essence or whatever than competition against a computer (especially when you win), so stick with that or you're likely to get horribly bored. THE BOTTOM LINE Dull and dated baseball sim that, like most things, manages to come up with a fair bit of entertainment if you rope a friend into joining in.

As far as I could make out, I was an agent of some sort (so, no big surprises so far), I was on-board a space ship and I had to fly about the place collecting magnetic cards. If I traded stuff a bit (Elite style) I could survive for longer. Mmmm. It's a kind of point-and-click kind-of-adventure kind of a thing with trading, shooting and puzzle-solving thrown in for good measure. The graphics are well-drawn, if uninspiring, and control is intuitive. And it's a good thing it is, really, given the slim nature of the instructions.

Unfortunately, as with many of these 'travel about and collect things in a space ship' games, it doesn't exactly burst at the seams with atmosphere and urgency. You spend most of your time looking out of a large picture window on the space ship, and I can get the same effect standing in my dining room and looking out through the patio doors at night. And I don't have to sell any grain or shoot any rebels. Although I do have to remember to water the weeping fig tree, I suppose.

I'm sorry, where was I? Ah yes, Starblade. Well, it's moderately entertaining for a while, but if you want to stare out of windows into inky blackness, bung me a tenner and you can sit in my dining room for a bit. For another fiver I'll even cook you some dinner. Believe me, I'm serious. • TIM NORRIS

CHASE HQ 2

Publisher: The Hit Squad Price: £9.99 Release: Out now

You're a road-blasting ever-lasting fastrunning good guy. At least you would be if the graphics were up to the promise of the game. Chase HQ 2 is a poor emulation of the arcade original in every way.

It's acceptable to have a poorhandling car in this type of race'n'chase game if the graphics are blisteringly fast (Are you sure? - Ed). At least this soothes your need for speed. Unforgiveably, Chase HQ 2 fails on both counts, ie the car handles like a skateboard on ice and travels so slowly that it's in grave danger of being overtaken by granny-walkerequipped bounty hunters. If any such unlikely entities existed, that is.

The severe lack of gaming power is augmented in a uncomplimentary fashion with the comments of the bad guys when you finally succeed in catching them. The first crook, for example, says "Don't talk nonsense, I know nothing". In reality he would probably say something like "Flip off, you illegitimate lovechild of a woman of questionable morals". (Am I allowed euphemisms like these?) (No. - Ed)

They say bad things come in threes, don't they? Well, the third irritating thing about this decidedly trivial pursuit is the inordinate amount of disk swapping required between each pursuit. Lotus Turbo (choose any version you want) moves faster than this, looks better than this, handles more ergonomically than this and still doesn't require any disk swaps. The words 'sloppy', 'lazy' and 'disinterested' seem to sum it up just fine.

With that off of my chest, I'll fill you in on the good points. There aren't any. Even the meagre asking price of a tenner is far too much. Turbo Cup (remember that old gem?) got put out to pasture at a fiver. It still remains one of the best race-andchase games on the circuit (Steve, you're quite clearly mad. You're fired. - Ed). Unless you bizarrely happen to belong to a select school of tenner-burning idiots, avoid Chase HQ 2 at all costs. STEVE McGILL

THE BOTTOM LINE Miles better than the first Amiga Chase HQ, but that still only makes it rubbish. Stick with a Lotus.

Get the Most out of your Amiga 1993 is the third edition of the best-selling Amiga title first launched in 1991. The aim is simple: to produce the most authoritative, comprehensive and up-to-date guide to the Amiga, its uses and its software.

Separate sections are devoted to specific subjects like music, word processing etc. and they're structured so as to firstly provide background information about that area and secondly offer specific product recommendations.

The Amiga market continues to expand at a terrific rate following last year's hardware launches. Because of this, Get the Most... has been completely rewritten for 1993, and in the process has swelled to well over 300 pages. Also included are two disks packed with specially-selected public domain and shareware software.

The Amiga is the most powerful, versatile and costeffective computer there is. Find out just what yours can do with Get the Most out of your Amiga 1993.

'MY EXAMS HAVE FINISHED'

Hello there AF I've had a lot of time on my hands recently as my exams have finished and I don't have to go back to school till September, so in the quiet mornings when my friends are in bed, I've been reading some back issues of AP. I've noticed that when you started out, you did a lot of Work In Progress features. Now, I don't know if you've put the industry's nose out of joint so that they don't talk to you, but this doesn't seem to happen any more and I think it should. In fact, you should do a different software house each month, one after the other, and then repeat them by the time you've done 'em ali. Yours hoping-you-like-the-idea-edly, Michael Smith, Leighton Buzzard

Er, so what do you think all those grey pages between True Stories and the reviews are, Michael?

I read with interest your article on 'cyberpunks', but either your memory banks failed or you ran out of room because, with the exception of New Romantics and Billy Idol, you failed to include anything on cyberpunk music, Now, far be it for me to criticise the glorious AP, but come on! New Romantics? Billy Idol? I'm sorry, but all New Romantics are big girlies and Billy Idol only qualifies because his legs are mostly metal. Hardly the sort of music your average cyberpunk would be found listening to, is it?

Real cyberpunks listen to music for men (and women) with loud pounding rhythms and a bottom end heavier than the M25. I suggest any budding cyberpunks tune in and listen to the likes of Minstry (sic), Nine Inch Nails, VoiVod, Fear Factory, Treponem Pal, Godflesh and Optimum Wound Profile. That lot will do for starters. Then of course there are the older cyberpunk groups that were all a little before their time, like Hawkwind, Rush, Joy Division (You're just being silly now. - Ed) and Ein-thingy Neubauten (not too sure of the spelling on that one) who used power tools on stage and quite literally took the place apart! Very cyberpunky, that.

So there you have it – a quick, up-tothe-minute guide on music for cyberpunks. Hopefully, all the young and impressionable people who buy AP will rush out and buy lots of records by the above groups. Am I trying to corrupt today's youth? Of course I am – you can't beat a good bit of corruption! Yours Industrially, Francis Donlevy, Bromley

Dear oh dear, Francis, you really did miss the point on this one, didn't you? For the benefit of you and any other satiricallychallenged readers, the cyberpunk feature was a birrova spoof, a birrova gag. Hence the line "Do I really have to listen to "industrial" music" (we hear you ask) "It's horrible!" which we used in the 'Lifestyle' bit of the piece. And I very much doubt if any of Joy Division ever thought of themselves as 'cyberpunk', either. I'm afraicl we were poking a little bit of friendly fun at cyberpunk types like you, Francis, and you fell for it. Tch.

'EXCELLENT MODERN ATTITUDE'

Dear Eyes and Ears, I can't stand people who write saying "I just thought I'd write to make a few points" so I won't, but I'm gonna make a few points anyway.

AP's by far the best read on the market, blah, blah, etc (except for the Spodland rhubarb) so if you need to do anything to get sales back up, don't axe things, expand them. More comps, letters, comps, cheats, comps, tips and comps. Did I mention comps? More please, and why do I never win? Some of the lemming limericks... pah! I'm not finished yet either, I want all readers to write to John Major about the following:

1. All old Spectrum games should be re-vamped and sold in packs of four. 2. The allocation of C4's teletext should be used properly with more letters and cheats, less charts and babble about 'Man With Long Chin'.

 Dave Green should open up his shirt and show us all his Mario joke.
 Dino Dini should be deported for letting us down with Goal! And lastly, more 'Viz'-like humour please. The International Rugby Challenge review was brill and if people can't take life with a bit of humour over the bad things that happen everyday then God help us. Also, I hope Linda is well and carries on Stuart's excellent modern attitude that words such as 'crap' are okay and used in real life and even on the telly – so there!

Climbing back into my shell forever, Chris Morris, Tadcaster

We agree.

'MY MUM IS A BAD LOSER'

Dear AMIGA POWER,

My mum is a bad loser, she goes in for basically every compo offered to her and wins none of them. Usually this doesn't upset or put her off from going in the next one that comes along, BUT when entering your lemmings limericks compo, she felt she was bound to win with one of her three limericks that she sent to you. When the results came she hadn't won AGAIN! She was very upset, especially because three of your winning entries weren't even proper limericks at all. Yes, that means you, Mark Berharrel, Phil Cook and James Lemmell of Leicester. I understand losing doesn't normally matter BUT when you lose to people who haven't even followed the compo rules, you tend to get slightly upset. So please would you apologise to my mum and get her to stop telling me how unfair it is to choose cheats as winners. I thought it was an AMIGA POWER saying that cheats never prosper. Yours very ignored, Robert Cotterrell, Yelling

I don't remember us ever saying that, Robert, but we're sorry anyway, Mrs Cotterrell. But the point is here, that on AP we like competition entries with attitude – ones that use a bit of imagination and originality, and we don't think that's the same as cheating at all. Better luck next time, eh, Robert's mum?

'COULD YOU PLEASE INDICATE'

To the staff of AP

I remember reading in a back issue of AP that Bullfrog were supporting the A1200 and were converting Syndicate to run in high resolution in 256 colours. Is this still correct, will there be an enhanced 1200 version of Syndicate, and if so, when will it be out? Also, in future could you please indicate whether there'll be enhanced 1200 versions coming out when you review the standard game? By the way, your mag's great, especially the covers and coverdisks on the last few issues eg Atom Smasher, Sensi, Extreme Violence, Tangle, Body Blows and Stardust. Yours Alan 'A1200-version-longingly' Phipps, Leicester

JURASSIC PARK T-SHIRT Winner

'KEEP IT UP LADS!' Dear guys and gals,

Is sponsoring going to make games cheaper? As games rapidly expand as a mass market industry, more and more companies are jumping on the bandwagon and having a go at linking their products to a game: Chupa Chops in Zool, Quavers with Pushover and One Step Beyond, Pringle with Ocean's new golf game – the list just gets bigger and bigger. I can only assume that the commercial companies are paying the software houses to plaster their products all over the place, but is there going to be any end benefit to the consumer? Are we soon going to have to play a game that's got tons of adverts all over the place and zero original artwork, and still have to fork out £30 or more for the privilege?

Even if the price could be lowered by a quid or two, it would be a start. It's nice to see that Team 17 are going ahead with reasonably priced games, so keep it up lads! How about a little investigation into prices and sponsorship on your part?

Yours, Colin McGinley, Duijbure-Huckingen, Germany

Doesn't take much investigating, Colin. Sponsorship does indeed mean companies paying software houses moderately large sums of money to feature their products in certain games. This in turn means that, er, the software companies make more money. You'd have to be a very special kind of naive to put any other kind of meaning on it – we don't remember Robocod or Zool, say, being any cheaper than the norm when they came out, despite being packed to the rafters with chocolate biscuits and lollipops. Or maybe we're just being overly cynical – let's wait a little while and see, shall we?

Sorry Alan, Bullfrog tell us that there won't be a 1200-specific version of Syndicate they didn't want to disappoint anyone by bringing out a quick cash-in job with just a few extra sound effects and that sort of thing. The good news, however, is that there will be a data disk with more missions, new weapons, and a multiplayer option, out real soon!

'I'M BEING FORCED BY CIRCUMSTANCES' Dear AMIGA POWER

I have a major problem, I'm being forced by circumstances to buy a PC. Why? It costs £499 for a PC with a 40 meg hard drive plus monitor, and my dad thinks this is brilliant. "What a deal, kid, a real computer for less than the price of this A1200 that you keep going on about, eh?"

Could you please help me? I've been using my trusty A500 for three years now, but I'm now afraid that I'm being left behind with all this talk of new Amigas. Could you give me some advice, how can I persuade my geriatric old man (he's over 40) that the A1200 is a better buy? Do I really have to bump the old guy off, or can you come up with a good reason for buying a new A1200 instead of some crappy old PC clone?

Anyway, I like your Dune jokes, got any more? I think your mag's the very best and when Linda gets better (soon I hope) then it'll be better. Yours hopefully, Steven Wight, Dumbarton

Well. I don't know what's wrong with your dad's brain, Steven, but £499 isn't less than £299 in any of OUR maths reference books - quite the opposite, in fact. Tell him to buy the A1200 and use the spare cash for an abacus which might teach him to count properly.

'PORTUGUESE CULTURE DEFENDER' Dear AMIGA POWER,

I've been seriously thinking about writing to you for a couple o' months, but it was issue 27 that made up my mind, and I'm finally putting pen to paper just to ask you this simple question: Why, for the everburning flames of Hell and the beard of good old Uncle Sam, why would you be interested in reading about what I'm thinking right now? Nobody cares about my personal ideas or ideals, so is there a place in this dirty and corrupt world for a true idealist?

Anyway, after reading the top of page 80 I felt a little discouraged, the problem being that short, to the point letters are far beyond my range. I realised that I'd never read a Shakespearean sonnet in my life and even thought about reading some, but then I came back to reality and turned such a silly idea down.

JAMES POND T-SHIRT winner

'AND SO DOES MY MUM!' Dear AP.

I love your mag! I love it! And so does my mum! She's always going on about whether I've read this bit and if I like that bit, and before I even get to see it, she's whacked the coverdisk into the Amiga and is playing the

What I really want to say is that David Hickey's letter in issue 27 confused me a little. I'd always thought that your goal was to make us laugh out throats off, it never occurred to me that you might be trying to help us readers with difficult purchasing decisions. Also, I think I've found a mistake in Civilization's manual, as it isn't rocketry and nuclear fission, but rocketry and computers that you need to get space flight. Frankly, I think that software houses should show more respect for us consumers, but respect seems to be something that's getting quite rare these days - it's capitalism's fault.

Moreover, everyone who tries to make a change does so by means of violence, which is also wrong and bad. Why can't everybody be nice people like you and me?

Yours idealistically, Luis Silva, Oeiras, Portugal

PS Do you have a habit of censoring the letters you publish?

Only the ones we understand, Luis.

TEXT SUDDENLY CHANGES TO

Dear AP

I've just bought Goal! and I love it, but I've found a few mistakes in it. To start with, if first game. I don't mind this, but I want to buy her a good platform game for her birthday. But she doesn't want ghosts and skeletons. She wants flowers and fluffy animals, jolly music and sound effects, so could you please suggest a game which needs to be:

- Quite easy
- Not too fast
 - Easy to control
 - Nice 'n' jolly.

Thanks a lot! You! Nice people! You! Yours gratefully happily, Michael Reed, Hurstpier Point, West Sussex

Easy. Rainbow Islands. Next!

you take a corner in the game and kick the ball so it doesn't go onto the pitch, the game doesn't actually register that it's gone off, so you're left looking at the scanner to get one of your men to the ball. Once you've got the ball, you play on like the ball never left the pitch.

In the advertisement they put in the mags, they claim that there's an editable cup system and a tactics editor, and although I've played this game for many hours, I can't find these things. Have they been trying to con the public by lying, or am I so pathetically stupid and in need of glasses that they're in front of me and I can't find them?

In the manual there are places where words are wedged together, in one place the text suddenly changes to Italian, and there are missing titles. What's going on? There are also many references to the editable cup system, which just doesn't seem to be there.

I really want to know if I've got an unfinished version and whether Virgin rushed it out to make their deadlines, because apart from these obvious mistakes, the game's very good. Yours footballingly, Hugh Owen, Huntingdon

The cup system was a bit of a cock-up apparently Virgin didn't realise that Dino Dini hadn't included it until it was too late, and the first batch of copies went out in an unfortunate cup-less state. It's all been sorted now, so if you give Virgin a ring on ☞ 081 960 2255, I'm sure they'll be able to sort something out, possibly.

'SLIGHTLY VAPID AND BORING'

Dear AMIGA (and let's face it) POWER, First off, can I just tell that Stuart Campbell Deputy-Ed type person, in response to his 'Stuart would just like to say ...' bit from AP28 to 'spin his arms in a wild rotation' first? Issue 28 was my first delve into Amiga media culture for a while, although I've got some early copies of Zero somewhere, and being a recent purchaser of an Amiga, it proved invaluable in making me fork out for Syndicate and Dune 2. One thing I'd like to know is how the hell I'm supposed to do the Atlantic Accelerator mission of Syndicate without getting shot to hell. I thought I'd done really well to get that far without much hassle and then - splat.

The letters page was a tad depressing in AP28. It may sound a bit snobbish of me, but I used to read the same type of letters in copies of Crash! when I was into my Speccy (remember them?) back in the mid '80s. I mean, come on! Complain about something original for goodness sake! Like why Radial Spangle aren't at Number One in the charts. Boring complaints like "Why do you review crap games?" are simple to answer - so that

'IT'S 2.17AM' Dear AP.

It's 2.17am and insomnia is once again rearing its ugly head. It's times like these when I ponder some of life's great mysteries, like what Mr Benn did for a living. I mean he spends all his time going to a costume shop to live out his fantasies. Is this in his lunch break or what? The only clues I have are that he wears a suit and is highly telegenic, which isn't much to go on, but I'll work it out.

In Linda's continued absence, it seems that a serious error has occurred in the AP office. Where's Sarah Tanser? She gets to do one review in AP27 and one in Amiga Format 49 and then she's thrown back into Amiga obscurity. I think it's disgraceful that such a talented and witty writer isn't part of the AP team, so go and bring her back. Never mind if she's got another job, headhunt, bribe, blackmail or kidnap her, and if she's not back in AP30 then I'll, I'll... (actually, can I get back to you on that one?). My new campaign STIFF AP (Sarah Tanser Is Female, Funny And Pellucid) will continue until she's returned. We're going to finance it with my brilliant money-making scheme.

It's easy really, take Pacific Islands and change the ground from green to orange and you can sell it as a new game for £30 a pop. Of course, I need to come up with a new title, so how about cashing in on recent events and calling it War In The Gulf? Unfortunately Empire have stolen my idea, and even worse than that, it looks like being a winner as Mark gave it a glowing review in AP28. Oh well, back to plan B: I'll bung in white scenery and the occasional polar bear and sell it as War In The Antarctic Islands. Give me a few weeks and I'll send Mark a copy to review. Well, it's almost time to get up, but only if you're a farmer. So I'm going back to bed.

Goodnight Linda, goodnight Stuart, goodnight Dave, goodnight Jacquie, goodnight Lisa, goodnight both Tims, goodnight Mark and goodnight John-Boy, Ian Ritch, Monifieth

'SLIPPING IN THE REAL RUDIES' Dear AP

Over the last sweaty handful of issues, I've noticed a change in your magazine. Even in AP's early days, the mag managed to skillfully avoid being an out-and-out computer mag, but now there's a metamorphosis taking place. Thankfully the change is most definitely for the better, but am I the only one who's noticed?

The mag's starting to spread its readership wings over a larger and larger area of people, the great sun of AMIGA POWER is rising higher in the sky, yet curiously casting a longer shadow. The reason for this change could be the ever-swirling vortex of staff, or even the new Editor, but my theory is that it's the new sense of humour that's eased itself into your publication. There's people know they're crap and won't waste money on them. No disrespect intended to Chris Murphy and Michael C Henderson, I'm sure they're very nice people. Just slightly vapid and boring, perhaps.

All I can say in finishing is that if you've got nothing worth saying, then at least WRITE about it. Final reminder, the album's called Ice-Cream Headache and it's by Radial Spangle. It's a great record to whip someone to and is therefore heartily recommended. Must dash, Hilton McBabreddy is calling me, Neil Cully, Halifax PS I work in insurance.

'DEVIOUS SLUGS OF YESTERYEAR'

Dear AMIGA POWER,

I'm writing to complain about the compo in issue 28. Unless the devious slugs of yesteryear have deceitfully wrapped me in a colourful blanket of confusion, you are a games magazine and Alton Towers is a theme park, so what has AP got to do with AT? I hate theme parks, especially ones with large roller coasters, they're far too scary for anyone with a fluorescent green dressing gown, like me. I don't see how you can use Alton Towers with an Amiga, they just aren't compatible. Have you ever tried to fit a theme park in your disk drive? Well, I can tell you that it's a lot harder than you might think.

It's not only this compo that strays away from the Amiga. Tell me, do any of the following have anything to do with Amigas – various articles of clothing, holidays to Europe, a VCR, a load of office rubbish, a portable music thingy, a remote controlled vehicle, a camcorder and a multigym? I'm sure if you tried hard, you could find a remote connection between these prizes and Amigas, but what I want are games. I know you usually offer them as runners-up prizes, but if I was to win a useless piece of junk, I'd rather you gave it always been the wit of the picture captions in the budget section, but now there's a new wave of alternative humour that I first noticed in the review of International Rugby Challenge with its infamous 'Life's a bitch...' box. And after that you started slipping in the real rudies:

AP27 page 72 - Close to the bone AP28 page 37 - Closer to the bone AP28 page 83 - Shatters the bone. I laughed at the first two and almost dribbled with mirth at the last one, and I'm quite ecstatic about the changes in your mag. If this humour continues, then the reader bracket is bound to increase as already I've seen people who aren't into computers taking private peeks at my copy of your mag. Actually, I've made a relatively serious point in this letter somewhere, so find it. Yours un-censoriously-forever, Jon Dickinson, Northam to somebody else and let me have a proper Amiga game instead.

There are many things I hate in life: sport, music, people, newspapers, theme parks, the government, money, time, adverts, Americans, TV, loud children, taxes, food, consoles, flowers and my sister to name but a few (Are you absolutely sure you haven't missed anything? - Ed), and the only things I really like are my Amiga and the ravishing games magazine that I buy for it. With this in mind, I don't think that there'd be much point in me going to Alton Towers. Yours springing from the sideboard, clutching possessively at the torrents of purple anchovy gravy levitating cunningly past my nostrils as though they were in limbo, Daniel Escott (No relation of the late Jean Baptiste Simeon Chardin), Leighton Buzzard You'd rather have a copy of a game than a £500 camcorder? You're a deviant, Daniel. But your wish is our command – if you DO win some glamorous consumer goods in one of our competitions, we'll give the prize to someone else and send you a game instead. Can't say fairer than that now, can we?

'INNOCENT FOREIGN TOURIST'

Dear AMIGA POWER,

When writing this letter I get the ominous feeling that its destiny is to act as an absorbent lining in Linda's waste paper bin, or even worse decorating the heads of some innocent foreign tourist whose only mistake was to be passing the AP window. But I digress.

I've just had the pleasure to play a demo of Stardust and it's quite simply blown away my conception of Amiga shoot-'em-ups. From the moment the first raytraced rocks rolled gently onto the screen to the second the end of level baddy was consumed in an expanding ball of plasma, myself and my friends were in a state only usually reached by years of dedicated research into meditative states and techniques. We'd all planned to buy a copy of the game the moment it reached the shelves, no matter what the price, and then we find that Bloodhouse are releasing it for only £16.99.

So this letter goes out to all those cracking crews spread about the globe. Please, please DON'T crack the protection on Stardust. For years you've all been claiming that the cause of your piracy has been ridiculous software prices, but these Finnish newcomers to the software scene have done something good to break the mould: they've released a game which would have hit the top spot at thirty quid for about half that.

If you let this game pass unmolested, you'll gain respect and a huge moral boost over the towering bloated corporate entities who are sucking us dry, and who knows? If Stardust gets to Number One, maybe they'll start to see sense. 'Nuff said, Kieron Gillen, Stafford

And so say all of us.

'WE WIPED YOUR BRAIN'

Dear AMIGA POWER, You don't know me, but I know you, since I've been observing you through a small camera inserted in Stuart Campbell's head. It was placed there on the night of the 12th April, 1991, when he was on the way home from the pub. Remember that Stuart? Thought not – we wiped your brain. Clever eh? The only reason that he's stayed on at AP since issue one is because of my need to observe your earthling ways – you didn't honestly think he was a decent journalist, did you?

The last months of observation have been more fun than Neighbours, what with Mark's ingrowing toenail and Jacquie's carbuncle bursting over Tim. I laughed for days. I'm afraid that since I've now revealed the source of my information, Stuart must now be shot, and I've come to the conclusion that I shall not be approaching within 100 miles of your offices for fear of being contaminated with the disease known as 'Beingapratitis'. Yours observingly, Adam Leachman, Lincoln PS Regards to Dave – See you on Mars, fellow extraterrestrial.

'PEOPLE ON THE C64' Dear AP,

I've recently played Little Computer People on the C64. I think it's brilliant and as I've got an A500 Plus I'd like to know if it is available on the Amiga. R Williams, Clwyd Yes it is, but you'll probably have a really hard time finding it. Try Activision on =010 331 4733 9664 if you've got enough money to phone France, or put an ad in our fabulous Secret Garden, of course.

AND ANOTHER THING...

PS A small tip: Don't try and tape a 2-hour long film on a video that only has one-and-a-half hours left to run. Ian Ritch, Monifieth

I'd just like to congratulate Mr Winstanley. Every mag needs a larger than life psychopath and he fits the bill perfectly, giving your already excellent mag an edge over competitors. Geoff Noonan, Rudgewick

I really enjoyed your review of International Rugby Challenge. Yours Amigally Helen H Smith, Glasgow

Why don't you write about a game's music very often? You did with Flashback and Desert Strike, but not with Jaguar. This has some of the best music ever to grace the Amiga, with its brill bass lines and great-to-race-to music. Neil Newsome, Sheffield

1993 JULY Today I finally realised that our main programmer, Will, wasn't the superhuman work-demon that I thought he was. The workload on our almost-finished mid-price platformer, Donk!, was far too great for him as it was, so expecting him to do the coding for Spodland as well was a little bit nasty, I suppose. Now, I could either shelve the work on Spodland until Donk! was finished, or try to find another coder to start putting Spodland together. You'll be pleased to hear that I decided on the latter, as I didn't really want to drag the Spodland project out any longer.

The reduced burden on Will has now allowed him to get all the bugs out of Donk!, as well as to adjust certain properties of the game after our recent playtesting. But that's not all - Will has also presented us with a super new colourful look for Donk! on the A1200. Now it has about 300 colours on the screen - more than any console game ever. On the subject of the and here it's on a 1200. The parallax really is gorgeous.

1200, we've also looked more closely at the possibility of a version of Donk! for the CD32. We could definitely make use of the massive disk space and lovely two meg of memory of standard. I must say that the CD32 is far superior to any rival CD systems such as the Philips CD-i, the PC Engine CD-ROM and Sega Mega CD, and it's quite a bit cheaper too!

When you compare the different CD systems, there really doesn't seem to be very much competition. The CD-i is just too expensive for what it is and most of the games for it are crap (just compare CD-i Pinball to the CD32 version of Pinball Fantasies - not much for Commodore's new baby to worry about there). Games for the PC Engine CD-ROM (not widely available in this country other than on grey import) have been a bit cacky in the past, but recently they've been getting better. Still, the PC Engine is no match for the CD32 in the technical department. At the moment, the only real rival to the CD32 is Sega's Mega CD - not in terms of tech specs (where the CD32 dumps on the Mega CD from a vast height), but simply because it has got a lot of financial backing behind it from a company that can afford this sort of expenditure. The big C, however, can't afford too much in the way of advertising, as money is especially tight in the company nowadays. Luckily for Commodore, despite all the explosive hype

behind the Mega CD products, most of the games themselves have faded with the sizzle that you get when you scoop hot rice onto a prawn cracker.

The CD32, on the other hand, has already got the Amiga community supporting it, which means that it will have loads of good software from the very start. Plus, with the addition of a keyboard and a disk drive, the CD32 will be able to take advantage of the entire wealth of existing Amiga titles, as well as all the public domain stuff - how many consoles have free games available for them, eh? The only warning I will make is that people shouldn't expect every CD32 product to be a full-motion video experience – people will buy CD32s and A1200s for games in all sorts of guises. After all, which would you rather play: Sensible Soccer or It Came From The Desert? Sure, super-realistic interactive movie games will come in time, but the main risk of a CD system is that the punters have a (totally understandable) tendency to

In the future, I think that the CD32 will be blessed mainly with A1200 expect too much of it. products which take advantage of the increased disk space to give more levels, better graphics and enhanced sound. But every now and then a really groovy CD-specific title will come out to show everyone how smart it really is obviously these products will become more common as more software companies develop on the machine and the user base becomes large

one in their right mind would buy any other system nowadays as, all in all, they are simply the best. Plus, from a developer's point of view, the CD drive means that illegal copying of games will be much harder, ensuring that software companies will stay with the Amiga market - piracy is the only reason why developers might consider abandoning the Amiga. So, until next month, this is a very optimistic and looking-forward-to-gettinghis-hands-on-this-lovely-newhardware Craig saying 'Byeeee!' (Byeeee, Craig. Oh, and 'Many Happy Returns'. - Ed)

ND ANOTHER GA CANNON FODDER by Sensible Software

yesterday? Yeah, we went off down to some sunny countryside locations in south Suffolk to make a 'pop' video for Cannon Fodder and to get our photos taken. ("Oh my God!" I hear the astute amongst you say in the realisation that you're gonna get even more Cannon Fodder publicity thrust at you for diligent

But anyway. So just what do I mean about a perusal.) 'pop video' for Cannon Fodder - a computer game? Well, this was Jon's idea. As some of you may know he used to be a musician-singer-songwriter type of thing who, on at least a couple of occasions, was nearly on the brink of international success with his band 'Hamsterfish'. It seems he is still trying to 'make it big' in the music industry, and to this end, has composed a couple of rather sexy tunes for Cannon Fodder. One's a rather delectable front-end menu piece called Narcissus, which, all being well, will be released by a very famous male singer in the not-too-distant future. The other's a real toe-tapping thigh-swaying reggae track called something like 'War Has Never Been So Much Fun!'. This is used in Cannon Fodder's fantastic intro scenes, and is the tune the 'pop video' has been made for.

Tell me, Dr Jools, just how do you make a pop video ? Right kids, it all starts very early in the morning - 5.30am, to be precise. First on the agenda - meet Stoo and Chris at work, pick up the other Chris on the way and meet Jon and Richard down in Haverhill Sainsburys. Haverhill is where we get kitted out with our 'Nam American army uniforms (check out those photos, man). Hey! Do we make those Hidden guys on the left look like train-spotters or what? (That's enough of that, gentlemen. - Ed) Sorry, back to the bird in hand. We then had to meet the

between a tank and some kind of troop carrier. We spent the rest of the day being shot by either cameras or toy guns, and attempting to act for the various scenes in the video, which of course you would love to hear about. And, of course, I'm gonna tell you that... I'm not gonna tell you about them, Sorry chums. You see Jon's trying his best to get some nice, some very, very, very nice people off TV interested in putting it into one or two of their programmes. (Anybody reading this who might be interested, please get in touch - Dominik? Violet? Dexter? Please?) So, if I tell you what happens in the video, I'll probably spoil all of the jokes for later - I hope that you'll understand. I could, instead, tell you about the game you're all awaiting in eager anticipation. Okay then, recent additions Cannon Fodder have been animals - including scorpions, various birds, a pig, various sheep, some seals, and many, many more. A number of traps have now been implemented - mines and trip wires, for example. And there are civilians in it as well, including natives, hostages, gunslinging cowboys and dirty old men. (Pardon? - Ed)

Right then, folks - get ready because it's competition time! Working from these lovely photos of myself, all you have to do is recognise me in a street anywhere in the country, walk up to me and casually say "Where's my pork pie?". The first person to do so will win a copy of Dino Dini's Goal! which includes autographs of the Sensi-soft squad on the underside of the lid. This competition is not open to anybody who even slightly knows me personally, it is deadly serious, and the winner will get their name printed in a future edition of AMIGA POWER. Having survived the harrowing experience that was the Dangerous Babies at the Gloucester Festival. Dave Golder narrowly missed being cast in the new stage version of Grease and reviewed some PD instead. What an exciting life he leads, eh readers?

ARCADE VOLLEYBALL PD Soft

Warning: this is for two players only. Well, there is a facility to play against the computer but that gets a bit dull. This is one of those games that only come alive when there are two of you.

Basically it's volleyball viewed from the side, played by two blobs who headbutt what looks like a ball of wool around the court. The graphics are functional (ie, rubbish) but it's fast, the ball bounces realistically, and the pace is varied, meaning that games can be deliciously unpredictable VERDICT: Complete rubbish really, but in two-player mode it's a hoot. RATING: ***

TETRIS PRO NBS

David McGuire

This isn't actually PD - yet. But it will be as soon as David McGuire sees this review. Y'see, David sent in this ten-level puzzle game along with a rather sheepish letter saying he wasn't sure if it was good enough to be PD. What a concept! Not good enough to be PD? He should see some of the rubbish I have to wade through every month - er, perhaps not, I wouldn't wish that on anyone.

Not that Jelly-Quest should just be unleashed cos it's no worse than a lot of other stuff - I reckon it's a little stonker (and I wasn't swayed at all by the fact all the level codes were sci-fi TV shows). Like all the best puzzle games the concept is simple, but allows for unlimited variations on the theme. It's a bit like Q-Bert in that you control a blobby Jelly wotsit who has to leap around tiles turning them from red into green. But there are loads of different types of tiles: some turn all the surrounding tiles green, some swap between the two colours every time you leap on while others remain green; some explode if you stay on them too long; others automatically make you jump in a certain direction.

The puzzles are ingeniously worked out and incredibly addictive. The game also looks very impressive - even the intro screen and high score sent at least three of the things, and, to be frank, I can't fathom out why anyone would still want to produce more. It's not like anyone's come up with an exciting new twist in the genre for the past two years. e Tetris Pro, for example. There are two main ks in this one. First, it's got bonus bricks that do such splendid things as turning the playing area upside down, or eliminating all the gaps. Second, every time you form a line a bit of a picture appears.

Ah, I know what it is -

it's a rogue catherine

tables ooze quality. On the downside you only get one life, which is extremely irritating, and it's often difficult working out which tile does what.

David reckoned that if I gave this the thumbsup he'd release this short version as PD then release an expanded version as shareware. My advice - do it (but include a few more lives - okay?).

VERDICT: PD libraries take note. Get this in your catalogues now. Despite some rough edges, it's a superior brand of PD puzzle game, and its looks can only be described as 'dead lush'. RATING: ++++

Complete the picture and you've completed that level. In later levels the difficulty is increased by having some blocks already in place, or by requiring you to form two lines simultaneously to reveal the picture.

And it's all very good. Very nicely put together. But hardly staggeringly original. Basically it's still just Tetris. So why should you go for this one as opposed to millions of others available? Er, well, the Bugs Bunny picture isn't bad...

VERDICT: Taken in isolation it's a darned fine, very addictive game. But it's hardly unique. There are more versions of Tetris around than the human mind can contemplate. And this is another one. RATING: ***

Artillerus has got more options than a Ford showroom plus the added bonus of dozens of different missiles to arm your tank with. It's all actually rather good.

THE GREAT ESCAPE OF BILLY THE BURGLAR

Magnetic Fields

Strangely, Group Four Security don't even get a mention in the credits to this game about the everyday story of people escaping from prison. I'd sue if I was them. I mean not only is the game obviously based on their stunning work in the security sector, but even in its execution it manages to capture (if that word can apply in this case) that essential Group Four factor incompetence. (Allegedly. - Ed)

To be honest, Billy ain't that bad, but it's got one flaw so debilitating the game is virtually unplayable. The concept is simple and has potential: in each level there is a series of platforms, the escaped Billy and a spotlight. Billy simply has to avoid the spotlight by leaping around the platforms.

Fair enough. The controls are reasonably responsive, if a bit limited, and the graphics and animation are pretty decent, but there's one problem. You get one life.

That's it. You die, and then before you play again you have to go through about five screens, none of which appear particularly speedily. It's irritating to the point where you simply can't be bothered.

VERDICT: Sorry - Billy might be trying to say something about the way video games devalue life. but I still want more than one for my money. RATING: *

THE REVENCE

First Choice

Er, apparently this is a game. But not even First Choice who sent me the disk were entirely sure. Something about deciphering a code to get on to the next level, they said. I'm still none the wiser.

It's certainly interesting in a demo-sort-of-a-way. You control an ED-209 (from RoboCop) as it walks along a graffiti-ridden alley. I say control, but use the word in the loosest possible sense: about all you can do is make him walk (at a set speed, in one direction) and Fire. And that's it. The occasional weird adversary appears and you gun them down bloodily, and that's about your lot.

Quite what the code is, I haven't got a clue. The 'game' certainly looks superb and works as a superior demo, but if anyone can actually work out this code nonsense, drop me a line.

VERDICT: I'm suspicious. Is this just a (pretty good) demo pretending to be a game? Or what? RATING: **

ZOMBIE APOCALYPSE

...you're dead! Oh, you already are dead, I notice. Damn.

Telescan

There is a recognised demographic class which sociologists have identified as the BCFG -Blood Count Film Goer (Mark, I reckon, would qualify). Their appreciation of a film tends to depend less on acting, plot or how much of her body Sharon Stone displays, and more on how much blood gushes out of various gaping wounds. This game should be right up their dark, dank, killer-rat-infested alley. It's a mouse-controlled shoot-'em-up of the sort where you have to move your sights over the targets as they appear on screen. In this case the targets are zombies, and zombies, by the their nature, being dead already, can't be killed. Nope, they have obliterated. So one shot just ain't enough; you have to pump these guys so full of lead they just fall apart. And they don't take getting blasted lying down; once they've cottoned on to your game they start milling around and even lobbing grenades at you.

You have to blast a set number of zombies on each level within a certain time limit, and you have limited ammunition. On the plus side, you have grenades that'll destroy everything on screen, and there is more ammunition to pick up along the way. There isn't really much to it, but it's fast, action-packed and looks superb. Even the sound is suitably atmospheric. A bit more variety wouldn't have gong amiss, but that's the problem with variety wouldn't have gone amiss, but that's the problem with zombies - they've got no imagination.

REVENGE

Magnetic Fields

(Er. Dave? - Ed) And just in time for the '93/94 football season we have Premier Picks which recaptures all the excitement of the battle for League honours ... well, maybe not. It's no Kick Off 2 sim, more like a game of Top Trumps. But it's still a great deal more fun than watching any bits of the aforementioned battle that involve Arsenal.

Premier Picks could possibly be the world's first 20-player Amiga game, each player choosing to play a team from the Premier division. Don't panic if you're of an anti-social inclination, though - any number up to 20 can play, the computer taking control of the other teams (nope, I'll resist the temptation to stick in another Arsenal joke).

Mr Ed, movie and TV star. VENGE

cards - you and an opponent then take turns to choose a card to flip over. But Premier Picks is much more a game of luck. You only choose one card each turn and the aim of each map is to find more 'Goal' cards than your opponent.

Other cards include Free Kicks (basically, have another go), Penalties (find a goal card quick), Substitute (that card gets turned back over and swapped for another one) and Foul (lose a turn). Also, in the first half of each match there will be a Half Time card; in the second half there will be a Full Time card. If these are picked then (would you Adam and Eve it?) that's the end of that half.

There is also a card reveal feature which shows you the position of up to six cards before a half commences, which does introduce an element of skill, but not much. It's guite good if an Half or Full Time card is revealed because then, if you get a goal ahead, you can just finish the half and stop your opponent from scoring any more (a bit of an Arsenal tactic if you ask me).

VERDICT: The game itself isn't exactly a stunner, but the presentation is top-notch with decent graphics, simple controls and loads of league and fixture tables. And if there are a few of you each playing a different team it can get deliciously vindictive and partisan. Top multi-player fun. RATING: ****

18TH HOLE

Magnetic Fields Shareware £4.50

To be honest, 18th Hole sometimes feels more like putting around Hampton Court Maze than real golf. The fairways twist and turn like the plot of a poor episode of Agatha Christie's Poirot, and you can't pitch over trees – the balls just bounce back at you in a dramatically unrealistic manner. Sounds pretty hopeless? Well, as a golf sim 18th Hole IS pretty hopeless, Sounds pretty hopeless? Well, as a golf sim 18th Hole IS pretty hopeless, but it's still darned good fun. You get an overhead view of each hole, some of which are ridiculously contorted – often the green is just yards from the tee but you have to play in a complete circle to get there. There are even holes where you have to hop from island to island. When (if) you finally get the ball in the green, the view zooms in for some close-up action.

It's also got a control system that's bizarre to say the least and downright tricky to be a little bit more informative. You choose the direction that you want the ball to go in using the good old traditional arrow keys to rotate an on-screen pointer. Then both your swing and power are selected with pendulum-like affairs – you have to try to click your mouse button at exactly the right second. It takes some mastering, believe me.

The one-player option takes the form of a tournament with five other

I've seen some weird sprites in my time, but this one takes the Garibaldi, it really does, It looks like the flying head from Zardoz being wheeled around in a shopping trolley. Truly bizarre.

And it's about the only thing of note about Starians, a fairly dull platformer that tries hard to be impressive but fails. It's a predictable trundle-around-levels-blasting-and-leaping-type thing with not very exciting pick-ups, dull nasties and repetitive timed-leap-type problems. The graphics are colourful and detailed but not very interesting, and the controls are about as responsive as a sloth in a coma.

To its credit there seems to be slightly fewer than infinite levels (ie, I got bored after playing the first six and consequently don't know how many levels there are, but it looked like I was still on the early ones) and there's a lot going on. But the overall effect is decidedly humdrum.

VERDICT: Yawn. RATING: **

JONUS FULSTRAAND

PD Soft

It's slow, it's old fashioned, it looks creadful, it's got the breathtaking originality of a Dannii MInogue single, the controls are more frustratingly irritating than a sackful of itching power down your boxers and it's not at all bad. Okay, maybe I'm going soft in the head, but I actually enjoyed this rubbish.

It's a platform game that's all about timed leaps, and that's about it. But the obstacles come thick and, er, about as fast as they can considering the snail's pace of the game. And most of them are enjoyably tricky, both in terms of working out how to get by them and actually attempting to do the moves.

Dannii Minogue singles lacked fish. That's where she went wrong.

The graphics look like Egyptian hieroglyphics but don't let that put you off. The levels are massive, and with nine lives a throw you can make impressive inroads into the game.

VERDICT: The sort of game that thrives in PD; tacky as hell but with a certain charm. RATING: * * *

computer-controlled golfers for you to compete against, whereas in the twoplayer mode it's a play-off between you and a mate from the 'real world'. It's a strangely addictive game – irritating, sure, but with enough playability to get you out on the links despite its drawbacks. The shareware version comes with one course disk, but when you pay your registration fee you get sent another – apparently sci-fi-styled – set of holes.

VERDICT: As a golf sim it's frankly a load of old knobbly bits, but as a game in its own right, it's got a certain charm. RATING: * (Four. Fore! Geddit? I'll just fire myself, shall I?)

scrolling blasters, and when you do they're usually pretty dull. As an adventure, Star Base has its faults, but you've got to give it credit for style. Well, you haven't. You're not the reviewer. But I am. And I AM going to give it credit for style. The graphics are very impressive (apart from the style of spaceship design which Freud would have a field day with), the control system is logical and comprehensive and the plot is suitably dumb – some sci-fi nonsense involving space stations and Stringons (which is such a crap name that maybe I won't give it quite as much credit for style). All these factors certainly draw you in initially.

But the character interaction could have been a bit more exciting – the bunch you meet here have about as much personality as an MFI sofa bed. And it has that irritating habit of killing you without any warning – BOY, I REALLY HATE THAT.

VERDICT: An aesthetically pleasing and very playable, but not very deep adventure. You'd have be seriously into adventures to part with £5 for it. RATING: ***

1869 Flair Software £29.99

AP27 79% DG

Powerfully complex high seas trading sim set in, you've guessed it, 1869. Easy to get into, generally fantastic for strategy fans and history-of-shipping enthusiasts, but otherwise a bit dull from a visual action point of view. ***

3D CONSTRUCTION KIT 2 Domark £49.99

AP21 80% JD

This is a games creation utility which gives you the power to put together your own 3D environments and make games out of them. This version gives you extra features not found on the first, like the ability to add sound effects, support for spheres and a disk full of clip art. It's quite hard to get into the programming, but it's still a lot easier than other languages and a neat way to get into creating 3D games. ****

ABANDONED PLACES 2

AP27 58% TN

Follow-up to (surprise, surprise) Abandoned Places 1, this is fairly standard RPG fare. It's big, it's easy to control and it looks great, but in the end, you'll find that the diskswapping and copy-protection-code-demanding really get in the way of your fantasy enjoyment. Competent, but hardly outstanding. **

A-TRAIN Ocean £34.99

AP24 82% RL Top 100 No.81 Slow-paced but thoroughly engrossing god sim, where you build up towns around a fledgling train network. Stunning graphics and gameplay so deep you'd probably break your ankle if you fell into it. A visually attractive strategy game now there's something you don't see every day. ****

AIR SUPPORT

Psygnosis £25.99 AP19 55% RL Uninspired and a chore to play, Air Support misses the mark as a strategy game and as a 3D blaster. It's a nice idea to combine two genres but it falls short when all the good bits are missed out. It's a sad, bad game, which is a pity. ***

ALIEN³

Acclaim £25.99

AP22 85% GP Top 100 No.38 Not a totally accurate representation of the third in the Alien saga, but it does capture the feel of the Alien films in general and, more importantly, it's a great game. A platform blast-'em-up that's not particularly original but provides loads of fun and atmosphere. Good stuff. ****

THE ANCIENT ART OF WAR IN THE SKIES Microprose £34.99

AP27 65% MW Wide-ranging World War 1 air combat and strategy sim, mostly let down by horrendous disk accessing the A1200, with uninspired graphics and very little entertainment value. Could be the most accurate Harrier sim available (on the A1200 that is), but not a game to get excited about  ( for A1200) forget it, it's too slow. It's still dull on

AP25 83% TT

Remember the film Memphis Belle? Well, if you've ever wanted to take on the roles of the entire crew of a B17 strategic bomber, then this is the simulation for you. It's a little short on high-speed graphic action, but more than makes up for it with attention to detail and seriously nostalgic World War 2 ambience. ****

BACK SIDES Emotional Pictures £25.99

AP27 20% JD The ancient game of Othello has mesmerised mankind for centuries And now (at last), it's been brought bang up-to-date - in this new version, the more tiles you flip, the more you get to see of 'attractive' young ladies in various states of undress. Now, you might expect this to be poorly programmed, badly playtested, tacky old rubbish - and you'd be right. It's also pretty good at playing Othello, though. Damn. *

BARD'S TALE CONSTRUCTION KIT Electronic Arts £29.99

AP23 62% JD It's a construction kit for The Bard's Tale, isn't it? Does the job well, but you'd have to be a real fanatic to plough through the unfriendly and unforgiving interface it uses to do it. Then again, if you were thinking about buying this in the first place, that's exactly what you'd be. So, er, that's alright then. ***

BATTLE ISLE '93 Blue Byte £25.95

AP27 86% MW Not the long-awaited Battle Isle 2 (due out in early 1994), but pretty much the original Battle Isle set in space - on a moon, to be more specific. Including all the stuff that made BI such a favourite (plus, unfortunately, the original's occasionally annoying slowness), this is a wargame that would entertain many an arcade fan with a good hour or so to spare. ****

BAT 2 Ubi Soft £30.99

With so many different styles of gameplay in here it could have been a real mess but the strategy and 3D elements combine really well with the adventure and RPG to give a cracking game. Nice one. ****

BC KID Ubi Soft £25,99

AP19 89% GP Top 100 No.86 Supercute platform beat-'em-up, brimming with style, character and humour. Very playable and very lovable. ****

AP26 71% SC

Adequate cute platformy antics featuring a beaver. Natural history devotees may be disappointed by the lack of attention to dam-building, while the rest of us have to put up with dodgy controls and loads of disk-swapping. Engaging enough while it holds your attention, but really nothing all that special.

BILL'S TOMATO GAME Psygnosis £29.99

AP21 81% TT Top 100 No.43 Bill wrote it, Terry and Tracy Tomato star in it and you play it. Totally bizarre and thoroughly original gameplay gets you to propel a tomato across the screen using tans. trampolines and jack-in-the-boxes With a hundred levels involving all sorts of puzzles, this will keep you going for ages. *****

BLOB Core Design £25.99

AP29 88% SC

Get this - you control a friendly blue blob who bounces up (out of the screen) and down (into the screen) onto little floaty platforms hanging in space. Off-beat? Definitely, and playing this puzzler's even more bizarre than reading about it. For a plain round thing, the blob's so cute it's practically illegal, and watching it plummet to its death is a sight that can reduce even grown men to tears *****

BODY BLOWS Team 17 £26.99

AP24 89% TT Top 100 No.53 The Amiga beat-'em-up that Street Fighter 2 should have been. It's a gloriously slick fightfest where you can actually control your character with an amazing degree of lethal accuracy. The only downer is how long you can bash your mates before it gets a bit boring. *****

CAESAR Impressions £29.99

AP19 84% DG Ruddy heck! At last, a halfwaydecent wargame thing! Lots of strategy, good presentation, compelling gameplay. Generally, it's pretty good. Blimey. ****

CAMPAIGN Empire £34.99

AP19 83% JD And here's another decent wargame. Pacific Islands meets, um, some other good war-type game. Strategytastic, and probably still a bit much for zapping fiends, but a lovely game for anyone with the slightest beam of light creeping through the closed door of their mind. ****

CASTLES 2 Interplay £34.99

AP29 44% MW

It's every boy's dream to grow up and be the ruler of a small European province between the years of 1337 and 1453. At least that's the messedup head-trip the programmers of this must have been on when they launched Castles 2 on the unsuspecting masses. Grainy monochrome movie footage fails entirely to take your mind off the slow pace and shockingly poor battle sequences of this listless strategy/ battle/conquest game. **

CHAMPIONSHIP MANAGER '93 Domark £25.99

AP27 80% TN Excellent footy management sim, and a big improvement on its prequel, with (it's claimed) 37 additional features. Astonishing attention to detail makes it ideal for the more cerebral strategists among you, but there's still no on-screen football action - if you want to see your lads giving it 101% out there on the pitch, go for Graham Taylor's instead. ***

THE CHAOS ENGINE Renegade £25.99 AP22 89% SC Top 100 No.14

The Bitmans return with an absolute corker of a shoot-'em-up. A cross etween Gauntlet and Speedball 2. this looks, feels and plays like a ream, with bundles of atmosphere and gorgeous graphics too. Most ntly, it's great fun to play, and two-player mode is even more ill. Unmissable. *****

CHUCK ROCK 2 - SON OF CHUCK Core £25.9

AP24 83% MW Top 100 No.66 Chuck's son Junior battles against some of the biggest, cutest monsters of all time to get his pot-bellied dad back. Formula platform material is spiced up with funny and playable sub-games and high-class cartoon characters. ****

COHORT 2 Impressions £29.99

AP26 52% MW

Roman battle sim that works either as add-on for Caesar, or as a standalone strategy wargame. By themselves, the battles tend to be confusing rather than enthralling, while the fact that you can win without giving a single order is a little, er, suspicious from the tactical involvement point of view.

COMBAT AIR PATROL Psygnosis £29.99

AP23 88% MW Top 100 No.59 Spiffing flight sim with the emphasis heavily on the all-action shooting aspect. Really good fun, and the most enjoyable flight sim since Knights Of The Sky.

COOL WORLD Ocean £25.99

AP21 59% TT Enjoyable (if unoriginal) platform game with clumsy character control as its main fault. The link to the film is tenuous to say the least.

CREATURES

AP24 20% SC A cutesy, platformer type of affair

where the only real entertainment comes from the single-screen torture scenes. Pixel-perfect jumps prove tiresome, and come to think of it, so do most of the other features. Not at all a fun experience. *

CRYSTAL KINGDOM DIZZY

AP23 25% SC

Issue 23 was a bit of a nightmare for over-priced software, and this was possibly the worst offender of all. Even the Dizzy fans in the office (well, Stuart) thought this was the worst-designed and most annoying to play Dizzy game to date, so making it cost three times as much as the rest has to be a bit of a mistake. *

CYTRON

Psygnosis £29.99 AP21 61% SC Paradroid 90 done again, only not as well. A robot slides uncontrollably about a maze shooting other robots and splitting up into two little robots occasionally. Lots of other options liven things up, but only for a lew minutes **

DARK QUEEN OF KRYNN SSI £32.99

AP19 67% JD

Yet another Krynn game, just the same as every other Krynn game you've ever seen. (And if you've never seen one, they're primitive RPGs with ridiculous price tags and as much user-friendliness as a pit bull terrier with its tail caught in a door.) The graphics are a bit better than usual, though.

DARKSEED Cyberdreams £34.95

AP22 88% MW Top 100 No.61 Giger-designed graphic adventure that oozes class and sophistication and creates a world all its own. A truty original game with masses of atmosphere and sick and slick action Not for the faint of stomach.

D.DAY US Gold £29.99

AP29 54% TT

The largest ever sea-borne invasion of history is boiled down into a series of vaguely amusing but pretty pointless sub-games. Land your paratroopers on target, bomb bridges in a 3D polygon flight sim section, attack farmhouses in an isometric combat section. And so on.

DESERT STRIKE Electronic Arts £29.99

and Mega Drive just got a whole lot better. Naturally enough, the Amiga version of this isometric helicopter gunship classic has got better graphics, better explosions and nerally all the stuff you need to turn your puny console-owning friends Lemmings-hair-green with envy. The gameplay's a bit simpl but there's plenty of missions and a brilliant Gulf-War-feel all round (if that's your cup of tea).

DRAGON'S LAIR 3: THE CURSE OF MORDREAD

AP22 24% TT The third instalment in the Dragon's Lair series has the usual mix of wonderful animation and design with doses of cartoon humour, but sadly no gameplay worth mentioning. Offers no lasting enjoyment. * DUNE 2

AP28 91% MW

Not really "more of the same", more a case of "more of something else" the first Dune was a stonking desert planet strategy adventure, and this is a sort of Sim-City-meets-Battle-Isle wargame affair. And very hot it is too, with real-time combat action and a nice line in synthesised speech as you send your troops off to fight in the scorching spice-wastes. AP26 77% TT

Excellent American Football strategy game, second only to the combined strategy/action angle of the mighty John Madden (of course). All the facts, figures and stats you could ever need are here, plus some pretty funky animations of players following lays, and uninhibited advice from Mr Landry himself. Shame there's no league table, but otherwise excellent end-zone entertainment for all you gridiron fans. ****

TRANSARCTICA arils £29.99

AP23 64% MW Strategy affair with a great plot, but let down by a lack of gameplay depth and some serious slowness. A bit of a disappointment. Brr chutf. **

TRANSARCTICA ENHANCED 1200 VERSION Silmarils £29.99

AP28 65% MW What more could we say about this than "it's just like the original Transarctica, only slightly faster and with more colours in the (already lovely) illustrations"? Oh, nothing. That's okay then. ***

TREASURES OF THE SAVAGE FRONTIER US Gold/SSI £32.99

AP19 34% | F An out-of-date RPG when compared to the likes of FOTB and Storm Master. It's slow with a disgusting amount of disk accessing and no hard drive installation option. It shows how an old formula can go stale when pushed too far, and this has been pushed too far.

TROLLS

AP21 83% MW

If bright, cute and cheerful platformtype games are your thing then this has to be the one for you. Everything about this is so fluffy and nice that you want to hurl, and there really isn't really anything bad to say about it. The only thing that beats it for sheer cuteness value is

TROLLS (ENHANCED 1200 VERSION) Flair £25.99

AP27 86% TT

What's the cutest thing you can think of? Now DOUBLE IT. Yes, if you thought that the ordinary Trolls was just-so-ever-so-sweet-and-lovelyand-nice then - well, you ain't seen nothin' yet. The enhanced A1200 version has positively the most gorgeous parallax-scrolling backgrounds ever seen in an Amiga game, and what's more they don't get in the way of the action or slow things down at all. If you like rmers, then this is what you bought an A1200 for.

TV SPORTS: BOXING

TE JOHNNY THUG

AP19 56% AP

Well, it's the best job anyone's made of a boxing game so far. Sadly, it's still a boxing game, and it leaves a fair bit to be desired in the lastingappeal department. **

VEKTOR STORM Inova Games £29.99 AP23 60% TT Scruffy-looking version of beautiful speed-up and slow-down and sticky control. Tempest was gorgeous, but this is mediocre, and 30 guid to boot. What a shame. **

WALKER Psygnosis £29.99

AP24 85% MW Top 100 No.58 Strut around in a huge metallic blue chicken and kill everything that moves in this needlessly gratuitously violent game. Mowing down masses of attacking troops from the comfort of your bedroom never seemed like such a great idea in this graphically wonderful (but somewhat repetitive)

WAR IN THE GULF Empire £29.99

AP28 85% MW

Yup, it's those tank-driving tearaways from Team Yankee and Pacific Islands again, this time taking their very own brand of armour-plated justice to a future war in the lucratively oil-producing Persian Gulf. There's a marvellous overhead-map view strategy aspect, a 3D lookingout-the-turret shoot-'em-up view, and simply loads of tank warfare features to keep you thoroughly entertained well at least until they get around to televising the next episode of the real thing. * WAXWORKS

AP22 70% .ID A horror game that fails to really frighten but does offer some good entertainment with macabre twists. There're maybe a bit too many mazes for its own good, but there are also some puzzles and some fighting to be done. Worth a look for horror fans. ***

adventure thing all the same. A brilliant control interface too, but the game needs a little more to it to quality for classic status.

WHALE'S VOYAGE

Flair £29.99 AP27 59% MW Hugely sophisticated RPG/ arcade game Tempest, prone to adventure, sometimes similar to the Eye Of The Beholder/Dungeon Master school, but set in a spacey sci-fi scenario. Nicely put together (despite being frustratingly hard to get started with), but somehow lacking in sparkle. **

WING COMMANDER Mindscape £34.99

AP21 55% MR Everything that was on the original PC version is replicated here, which means that the standard Amiga is so bodged down with data that it runs hopelessly slow, far too slow to make it playable. On the A1200 though, the 3D sequences run fast and smooth, making this the benchmark game for future A1200 shoot-'em-ups * (for the ... A1200)

WIZKID

AP15 91% MR Top 100 No.15 A refreshing game that mixes psychedelic arcade adventure, football, and bad jokes with arcade games like Breakout and Pengo. With its perfect control system it's as much fun to play as it obviously was to write. The best game ever (beginning with the letter W at least). If you don't buy Wizkid, your life Ily will be a lot poorer *****

WOODY'S WORLD Vision £25.99

AP26 70% JD

'Traditional' platformer bearing a more-than-passing resemblance to Super Mario Brothers. There's plenty of running, jumping, and banging stuff with your head, but nothing to lift it above the crowd. Unless you happen to be really into running, jumping and banging stuff with your head, that is.

WORLDS OF LEGEND Mindscape £25.99

AP26 81% MW Well, Legend was, er, legendary ("an RPG that's got everyone in the AP office playing it") - and this is more of the same. More specifically, it's exactly the same game engine, only this time with a different adventure to play through - one with a distinctly oriental flavour. The game's as absorbing as it ever was (which is very absorbing', if you must know), which, ironically enough, means that you're better off buying the original Legend (now out on budget, economy fans) unless you've already played the first one to death and want more like it. ****

WWF EUROPEAN RAMPAGE Ocean £25.99

AP22 18% JD Minimal control system, inferior graphics and practically non-existent gameplay. Quite simply a completely crap beat-'em-up that vies for your dosh by cashing in on WWF mania. (What we're basically trying to say here is "Don't buy it".)

YO! JOE! Hudson Soft £26.99

AP28 91% SC

Gorge usly extensive platformer, featuring the wide-ranging adventures of the eponymous Joe and his friend Nat. Just like Hudson Soft's previous high quality output, the whole thing's characterised by an astonishing attention to detail, with beautifully-designed levels, excellent effects, loads of excellent weapons (including a chainsaw and chuckable Molotov cocktails) plus a simultaneous two-player mode -- it's not perfect, but it's nice to see people trying. Attention to detail, see? That's the key to a good game. Yes. *****

ZOOL Gremlin £25.99

ZOOL ENHANCED A1200 VERSION Gremlin £25.99

AP24 78% TT Top 100 No 71 this. Colourful parallax scrolling backgrounds make the whole game a lot prettier, but also clutter it up to an extent that they hide on-screen baddies. Not so much enhanced as tarted up, and you could well find that you prefer the original. Still, some opinion in the office DOES hold that this is a big improvement on the original, so at least try to have a lool at it if you've got a 1200. ++++ did get it in this month! Blimey, eh?

It's the ultimate road race. It thunders through six European territories and bullets accross the U.S.A. It's not just a head-to-head between happy snappin', joy riding, boy racers... this is seriously hot competition against the meanest drivers on the tarmac. Beef up your hatch-back to enhance the speed and handling, plan your route and burn off the bizzies. So fire up your engine and pump up the gas for some fearsomely dangerous road racing. BURNING RUBBER ... the sweet smell of victory.
